

S cluster words

Tagged with: Consonant clusters For people speaking Spanish and Portuguese, s cluster words can be tough. The mistake is to pronounve an 'eh' vowel in front of the cluster. Watch this video and try to break that habit! YouTube blocked? Click here to view the video. Video text: Made especially for speakers of Spanish and Portuguese, in this American English pronunciation video, we're about pronounging words that begin with a S consonant cluster. Special thanks to my users who helped me develop this topic. In Spanish and Portuguese, words do not begin to swarm with an S consonant. But in English, there are many common words that do. For example, study. Thus, these speakers tend to put forward an 'eh' sound: eh study. Last week, I went to a gala, and a woman there accepted an award. She was a native Spanish speaker, and while giving her speech, she said the word 'spiritual'. And she pronounced it eh-mentally, with that eh vowel. I particularly noticed this because so much about her accent was very, very good. So, even after someone has done a lot of work and fixed a lot of problems, this starting S-consonant swarm tends to stick around. So how should you work on the starting words with the S consonant cluster? Fortunately, in both Spanish and Portuguese, there are words that begin with the S consonant. For example, 'sin' in Spanish, and 'sem' in Portuguese. So, when you practice words starting with S consonant clusters, I would alternate them with your word starting with an S consonant. For example: ssssin, sssstudent, and so on. Let's go over all the different starting S consonant clusters. ST, like student. STR, street. SM, smart. SN, snake. SL, slap. And, the SK consonant cluster, which can be spelled four different ways: school, scoop, skip, square. SP, space. SPL, split. SPR, spring. And SW, fast. I can hardly believe how many consonant clusters there are! But now that you know what they are, they're practicing. Drill them. Look for words you use in the everyday conversation that starts with a S consonant cluster. Keep track of it, and at the end of the day, use those words to drill. If you can start a word with an S, you can start a word with an S cluster. That's it, and thank you so much for using Rachel's English. our sailboat. It was a bit messy so we had some soaps and cleaned it first. We had some sandwiches, soups, and juice and left the house early on Saturday morning. We sailed around the lake for a few hours. It was relaxed to just sit and listen to the water against the boat and soak up some sun. Dad told me he was sorry about the baseball team that lost. They'll get more chances to win in the future, he said. I told him I wasn't too sad anymore. I just really wanted them to win, I said. Dad suggested we sing the team song. He thought it would help us get excited for next vear tournament. Next vear we'll be sitting outside on the grass behind the fence to watch the game, dad said. We can take some salad, popsicles and your toy dinosaurs. It will be the nicest we've ever joined a had. I love my dad. He's so good at helping me be happy. No-Kiss Club Kiss is gross. It makes me me On Valentine's Day, my dad gave my mom some sunflowers in a glass vase. But that wasn't all. He also bought her a new purse, a bracelet and a red dress. Mom was so surprised! She was so excited about all her gifts that she threw her arms around dad and gave him a big kiss. Yuck! It's one thing for them to say that they love each other all the time, but the kiss is too much for me. I decided to start a club called Anything But Lips for people like me who don't like to kiss. I put a sign outside and told all my friends to come. We're going to meet six o'clock in my father's office once a week. We'll talk about anything un related to kissing. I've put together a list of different topics that include: grasshopers, motorcycles, seatbelts, football, tennis, soups, motor racing and insects, to name a few. Before I'll let them get into office, everyone will have to sign a contract and say they won't talk about kissing. We have our first meeting tomorrow. I hope some people come. The Ice Hotel My family and I want to see the ice house. It's really called IceHotel, but I call it the ice house. It's located in a small town in Sweden called Jukkasjarvi, I don't know how to say it, but it's o.k. Everything inside it's made of ice. For real! There are ice sculptures, ice banks and even an ice restaurant. People get married there, seeing the Northern Lights, snowmobiling, dog-sledding, and learning how to ice sculpture. It looks like so much fun, if you don't mind the cold. Some of my friends wondered how someone would sleep on a bed of ice. I told them you sleep on a bed of ice. I told them you sleep on a bed of ice. I told them you sleep on a bed of ice the same way you sleep on your bed at home ... with blankets! I wondered if the hotel had ice showers with ice soap, but my mum told me it would be too cold for people to do it. I've read that they're a sauna in one of the luxury rooms though. Our family is going to save us money this year so we can go to Sweden in December and experience everything the ice hotel has to offer. We're so excited we've already started packing! She twisted her knee as she skied off with a steep hill. She still didn't remembered was wearing her red scarf, black ski mask and sky blue snowmobile. She brought a basket with some home made cookies for her and her friend Skip to eat at lunchtime. As she skied down the hill, she remembered one ski caught an edge in the snow and the next thing she knew her knee was in a lot of pain and she was rescued by the ski patrol. While in hospital, the doctor asked her some guestions about how she skied on the mound. She remembered he had a deeply husky voice. He told her that ski accidents happen all the time and sometimes for no reason. As she sat at her work counter, she rubbed her knee and just thought about how badly it hurt. She wanted to ski again, but she couldn't escape the fear of hurting her knee again. She didn't like feeling scared of skiing. She had been skiing for nearly 10 years and wouldn't give it up. She decided she'd go skiing this coming weekend. If I take it easy and go with a friend, maybe I can get past the fact that I'm afraid, she thought. Adventurous Skunk Skylar is the most unique skunk you'll ever meet. She wears pink skirts and likes to sky dive. Her favorite color is If you ask her why she likes to sky dive, she'll simply say: I like the wind in my face. Skylar keeps so much of the wind in her face that she also dives ice skating, water skis and scuba. Dive. isn't afraid of anything. I asked Skylar why she was diving because you can't feel the wind in your face underwater. She just smiled and simply said: I like the water in my face, as long as I have my mask on, it feels good on my mustaches. I asked Skylar how she learned to do this type of sport. She told me she's been interested in ice skating since she was in kindergarten. As she grew older, his skiing began to water and dive. I only started diving last year after finishing high school, she said. I asked her where she gets the money to pay for these sports. She told me she was working two jobs. She sells cookies and other bread at the bakery during the day. At night, she makes computer banks and sells them to furniture stores. Skylar works hard and she also plays hard. I told her to have fun and be careful. He was chased against a ski slope by bad guys on sledge. He took an expensive bracelet and destroyed the bad guys' castle. The bad guys launched missiles at him and tried to slow him down. When Sloan reached for something to defend himself, all he could find was a robe. He fired rocks from the garment as fast as he could. The bad guys started laughing at him. Not because of the clay, but because Sloan has all these wearing pajamas and pink bunny slippers. Sloan didn't care, though. He remembered he had a special capsule that could help him. He reached his sleeve, grabbed the capsule and thought it. A few seconds after thinking the capsule, Sloan was invisible. The bad guys couldn't see him. Just as he was about to escape, he woke up. He's smart, a smooth dealer, and always smells like pizza. Some people may not like it, but since I love pizza, it's u.k. with me. I'm a locksmith and Smitty is the person I order parts of. When people break, break or ruin their door handles or locks, they call me. There are thousands of different types of locks and handles, but Smitty knows all of them. That's why I think he's so smart. He and I were classmates at Smith High School and have worked together for 10 years now. He always answers my questions and has just the right locksmith tools and products I need to help my clients. I wondered if he had a secret locksmith lab in his basement. That way, he can be around locksmith parts and tools all the time. When I asked him how he knew so much, he smiled and said he was getting a book at Christmas 10 years ago. The title of the book was Everything You Need to Know About Locksmithing. It's not a small book, he said. He learned everything he knows from that book. Of course, he still needs to be smart and remember the information in it, and being a smooth salesman also helps. There's a lot to be learned from reading. I have to start reading the books I have in my basement. Dumb Robber As the policeman looked at the crime, he saw some clues. The robber who broke into the house wasn't that smart. He smashed the window to unlock the door. But the door was not locked. The handle had just been replaced by the locksmith and did not have a lock on it. Then the robber made himself a smoothie, twing fingerprints over the blender, the glass from which he drank the smoothie, and the placemat on which he put the smoothie. The robber even dumped some of the smoothie to the ground, stepped into it and left footprints in the kitchen. Now the policeman had fingerprints and a shoe size. The robber struck off the ornaments so the policeman could tell that he had gone down the stairs to the basement. The homeowner was a businessman who worked out of his basement office. When he got to the basement, the policeman could smell of the smoothie so he knew the robber was there. The policeman looked around the basement. There were photos of the homeowner playing baseball. Judging by the photos, the thought that the homeowner was a first baseman. The policeman saw a small trash can on the homeowner's desk. It looked like the robber smoked while in the basement that would give the policeman more evidence to catch him. It will be an easy matter to solve, he thought, as he stepped back upstairs. He knows specific stats about almost every baseball, basketball, football, volleyball, hockey, tennis, rugby and cricket game played in the past 6 years. The first basketball game he watched sparked his interest. From that time on, he almost became a specialist in most sports and their players. I think he should be a sportswriter. If he had it his way, he'd eat spoonfuls of sports for breakfast. When I told him he had responded by saying, They may be a little crisp! Recently, he became more interested in motorsports such as motoring, motorcycle and speedboat racing. A few months ago, he turned spark plugs into his car. He realized there were sports using machines and he didn't know anything about them. Since then, he has spent every day watching motorsport and researching. He spends a lot of time and money learning about sports. That way, he can talk to others about them and answer questions they may have. Some people have asked him to speculate on which teams or managers will win so they can bet on them. Spike won't do that, though. He says he has too much respect for sports to sell them out. It started about 2 p.m. after completing lunch. He used chops so he wouldn't eat too guickly, but the food was catching up with him. He stopped at the store on his way home from work because his chest was burning. He hoped that he could find something to help stop the blaze. The anal-hour pills he bought didn't cost too much, especially if they were to help. It started storming outside and Stan Stan it would be a good night to stay in and relax on the couch with his favorite book Stewart Little. He had plans to make steak for dinner, but he's chosen something lighter since his stomach bothered him. When he got home, he walked up the stairs to his bedroom and dressed in his most comfortable living room clothes. After changing and eating a light dinner, Stan tuned his stereo in for some classical music, sat down and started reading his book. He read for about an hour and decided to stop and go to sleep. He thought about eating his leftover Chinese food for breakfast in the morning, but he quickly changed his mind. The storm passed and everything outside was still. Stan drifted away to sleep. Running Stars Steve and Dusty were the fastest runners on the high school track team. No one messed with them. Last August, the both ran the longest races, finishing in first and second place. Once, someone asked them the question :How did you become such good runners? Both of them had different statements. Steve said: I follow a constant and consistent training program and meal plan. I use a stopwatch to time my speed every race and I try to beat that speed every time. Dusty said: I run stairs every day in the football stadium for thirty minutes without stopping. I can run long distances because I have established endurance in my lungs and muscles. A woman coming from the TV station wanted to ask them more questions like when they started running and how they were interested in it. Steve said: My grandfather told me stories about himself when he was a runner and that's what interested me in that. Dusty said: When I was a middle school student, I was always restless at night. I started to fall asleep during the day. Running helped me stay calm, stop being anxious and go to sleep. If I felt restless, I'd go on a short run, and after that I'd be right to sleep at night. The wife of the TV station told them they are fantastic runners and wish them good luck on their next race. Steve and Dusty thanked the woman and went to the shoe store to buy some new running shoes. Sweeney was looking forward to the swap meeting, there was so much fun and new things to see there. Last week, he saw a swaan with 4 ducklings and the week before that he saw a swarm of bees that were a little scary. In the past, he has eaten sweet and sour chicken with Swiss cheese, bought a new swim suit and found the perfect best to sweep his floor at home. During breakfast, Sweeney read the newspaper and saw a new swap meeting that was in town. He couldn't believe his eyes. Two swap meet? he thought. He wondered if he should switch what exchanges he had gone. He nervously searched the ad to see what time the second swap meeting happened. His hands started sweating. The paper said the second swap meeting was Saturdays at 2:.m. Sweet! says Sweeney. He knew exactly what to do. He would simply go to both exchange meetings! For a moment, Sweeney thought he might have to switch whatever swap meeting he would go for as well. He was so happy that he could go to both of them. To celebrate, he went into his room and met his swap with sweater and danced to his favorite Swedish music, both of which bought at an exchange. Sweet birds have you ever met a slew or a sip that loves sweets? There's a lake at our house we're going to swim in all the time. Last week we were ready to eat lunch. We brought ham sandwiches with Swiss cheese made from sweetbreads and some sweets, chocolate cake and licorice. We started eating. Just then a big white swaan flew over by us. Then a small sip flew off and landed on the ground through the blanket we ate on. Both of them walked up to the cake and stuck their beaks in it. I wiped the cake away from them, but they just switched their position to the other side of the blanket where I put the cake. I was swended at the swaan. It didn't bother him and he just kept eating. I was swten at the sip. He flew away from me but quickly came back to eat the cake. I worked so hard to get the swaan and the sipping away from our sweets that I started sweating. I've never seen a swaan or sipping with such a strong sweet tooth. I was worried my wrists would become so swollen to watch at the birds. Thankfully, they weren't. Next time we go swimming at the lake I think I'll leave our sweets at home. Returning to Top of S Words Page This list of functional words is professionally selected to be most useful for a child or adult struggling with producing the S sound. We encourage you to use this list when practicing at home. Home practice will make progress in achieving individual language goals much faster. Speech-Language Pathologists (SLPs) can only see students/clients 30-60 minutes (or less) a week. It not enough time for your child to overcome an articulation disorder with the S sound. But with high case loads..... it's everything SLPs can do. There's only just lots of time in the day. Every day your child goes without exercise, it becomes more and more difficult to correct an S mistake because he/she still says it wrong. We know life is busy, but if you read this, you're probably someone who cares about helping their loved one as much as possible. Practice 5-10 minutes when you can, but try to do it on a consistent basis (daily). Please use this list to practice. This will be a huge benefit to you and your loved one's progress.
