A list of words that end in ly. An adverb is the part of speech that describes, modifies, or provides more information about a verb in a sentence. An adverb can also be used to modify or qualify adjectives, other adverbs, or entire groups of words. Many English adverbs end with the suffix -ly, as this is a quick and easy way to turn an adjective into an adverb. For example, the sad adjective turns into the adverb sadly adding -ly at the end. The same goes where perfect becomes perfectly. Suffix is also an excellent way to describe how something, or how often, something is done. While it's not a difficult and fast rule, and there are certainly plenty of exceptions, spotting the final -ly in a word is often a good indicator that you're looking at an adverb. Many adverbs end up in -ly, but not everyone does. Common adverbs that don't end up in -ly include much and never. This list is understandably not entirely exhaustive. For more examples of adverbs, be sure to read our list of 100 adverbs. However, here are 64 examples of adverbs ending with -ly to begin with:accidentallyadamantlyangrilyanxiouslyargumentallybeautiflyboldlybravelybreathlycarelycer in a way that is certainly dangerous to too little, effortlessly, even finely, rarely generally generally sadly gratifyingly she happily very highly-innovative rarelyloudlylovelylowlylowlymassivelymotionlymourlymourlymournlyutlly normallypainstakinglypartiallyperfectlypracticallyproudlyquicklyquietlyroughlysadlyseparatelyshortlyslowlysmoothlysudlysudlythanklywrongly One of the best ways to understand how adverbs work is to see them in action in some sample sentences. He looked at the creature inquisitively. George was lazily lying around the house all day. I'm afraid the knight was mortally wounded in battle. Nervously, Alice turned the knob and opened the door. And they lived cheerfully afterwards. Circumstances changed rapidly overnight. As it turned sharply, the parcel flew out of the window. They embraced warmly. Sara took her time, but she finally got there. The committee hastily organized the event for the purpose of Exercise a watchful eye when using adverbs, as people often used them incorrectly, confusing them with adjectives. A very common mistake that people make is to say I ran to the store quickly or Runs very fast. This is it's the correct use of the word fast. In these sentences, quick is editing ran and runs. These words are verbs, and they must be modified by an adverb, not an adjective. Therefore, the appropriate form of the word to use is quickly. Even the good adjective and the adverb well are often used interchangeably, but it is not always correct. Read our article on When to use well and when to use well to learn more about this confusing common issue. slowly, perhaps, uncomfortably, beautiful, delicately, beautifully, fundamentally, definitely in this lesson we are looking at rules like falling or keeping the 'e' with ly, when there is a double l + ly, and changing y to i + ly The rules are quite simple and reliable, but some of the words are difficult to write: surely, probably, absolutely, probably, reasonably, let's take a look at 6 rules around adding -ly to the words Rule 1 Let's just add -ly to the words ending in a slow consonant + ly = slowly infinity + ly = infinite week + ly weekly stupid + ly = stupidly friend + ly = independent friendly + ly = fast independent + ly = quietly vivid + ly = vividly Rule 2 When we add -ly to words ending in -ful, makes -completely (with double l) careful + ly = carefully wonderful + ly = wonderfully beautiful + ly = beautifully faithful + ly = faithfully peaceful + ly = peacefully successful + ly = successfully Rule 3 The same rule applies to other words ending in 'l' (makes a double 'l') accidental + ly = accidentally cool + ly = coldly cruel + ly = cruelly special + ly = especially final + ly = finally financial + ly = financially formal + ly = formally general + ly = generally lethal + ly = lethal occasionally + ly = occasionally total + ly = totally social + ly = socially normal + ly = usually Rule 4 Let's keep the 'e' lonely + ly = lonely love + ly = beautiful live + ly = full lively + ly = fully defined + ly = definitely desperate + ly = desperately extreme + ly = extremely immediate + ly = immediately separated + ly = separately sincere + ly = genuinely lucky + ly = luckily Exceptions : We drop the 'e' into really true + ly = really (this is a common misspelled word) we drop the 'e' unduly due + ly = duly drop the 'e' in whole + ly = entirely Rule 5 Let's change the 'e' to 'y' into words ending in consonant models + le (-ble, -ple, -tle, -gle, -dle, -kle) kind - sweetly simple - simply terrible - terribly wrinkled - wretched - miserably possible - perhaps incredible - incredibly likely - probably responsible - Rule 6 When we add -ly to the words ending in -y we change the 'y' to 'i' if more than one easy syllable - easily, uneasy happy - happily, unhappily busy - greedily crazy - insanely stable - constantly lazy - lazily necessary - necessarily, needlessly shabby - shabbyly stable - constantly greedy - greedy but we keep the y in a shy syllable + ly = = sly + ly = sornly coy + ly = coyly But exceptions: day + ly = daily gay + ly cheerfully Now try the exercise below Do you ever have trouble writing words ending in -ly? If you do, you're not alone. Adverbs as surely, probably, absolutely, probably, reasonably and hopefully often cause problems when it comes to spelling. We often ask the same questions: is it -ly or -ily? Do we write -ely, or just -ly? Normally we add -ly to an adjective to get the adverb: fast quickly becomes, dangerous becomes dangerous. The problem is when an adjective ends up in -and o -le. What do we do in these cases? Do we keep or remove the and before adding ly? These short and simple rules should help you. When an adjective ends in -e, we simply add to form the adverb: politely politely, definitely defined as 'absolutely, absolutely, complete' completely. Be careful when an adjective ends in -le. We remove the and and add y to form the adverb: probable ' probably, possible ' possibly, terrible ' terribly, reasonably reasonable'. Don't be confused by adjectives that end in -l. Just add and the adverb will therefore end in -ily: confident ' hopefully, beautifully, useful ' availability, attentive 'carefully. What words do you find difficult to write?
