[Boongq gang] No, no Boonk gang is the phrase of social media influencer John Robert Hill, known for posting videos of himself stealing things. Thanks to Hill, boonk gangs have also become a way to address property damage or steal things in amazing fashion. Related words: Gank Guava Juice Keemstar Rémi Gaillard simp Karen WAP yeet flipagramcdn.com Boonk is the moniker of John Robert Hill, a prankster and rapper who became famous online in 2017, posting videos of himself committing crimes. They mostly involve various forms of theft, but sometimes rubbish goods and disorderly behavior. After the crime, Hill shouts his boonk catcher gang! The phrase doubles as his various social media pens, which have earned millions of followers while active. Unsurprisingly, Punk's stunts did not please his victims—or law enforcement officers. In July 2017, he was arrested for stealing doughnuts from a Miami Dunkin' Donuts. Undecided, Hill continued a series of astonishing crime antics, getting into trouble again for ripped off his shirt in Chick-fil-A, standing on the counter, and smashing milkshakes on his chest. After that, he apparently fled to California, where he continued to do his stunts, though his social media pages were suspended. In March 2018, he was arrested for unlawful possession of assault weapons and drugs. Despite Hill's fame, his Catchphrase Boonk gang took on a life used as a slang verb to describe committing theft, property damage or other crimes in a manner Bunk himself. This has led to criticism that Hill is encouraging young people to commit crimes by portraying his actions as humorous.
