Continue Reading OHS Presents, Twisted Tales of Poe, October 29-30 A member of the Orono Public School District has tested positive for COVID-19, the district has told families. In a letter Sunday, the district informed students, families and staff at Orono Intermediate School, which serves students in grades 3-5, that someone within the school community tested positive for the crown. It is the first laboratory-confirmed case of coronavirus in the Intermediate School, Orono Public Schools spokeswoman Lyssa Campbell told BMTN on Monday. However, during the summer there was a reported case in the region's Early Childhood Program, during which families in the program were notified. We are grateful that the person tested positive is doing well and at this time we have not received any reports from other students or staff members experiencing diseases with symptoms similar to those of COVID-19, the letter says. The district worked with the Minnesota Department of Health (MDH) to identify people who had close contact with the individual and contacted them personally, the letter said. Campbell told BMTN the site did not publicly share how many people were informed of having close contact with the person who tested positive. Meanwhile, the district decided to inform the entire school community of the positive test out of an abundance of caution, noting that the risk of exposure to people in the building on these dates (September 14-16) is no greater than the risk of contracting the virus in the general community, the letter says. According to the plan to return the area to school, people who have close contact with someone who is positive for the virus should stay at home. Meanwhile, the letter says that those who were not notified of close contact with the person tested positive do not need to stay at home unless they develop symptoms. Sign up for our breaking news newslettersEveryone in the school district is asked to monitor themselves for symptoms related to COVID-19, and parents of students are directed to submit a health check every morning for their student, the district's plan says. We understand that this can cause concern in our community, the letter says, noting that it works with MDH to monitor the situation and continues to conduct daily health examinations of students and staff, daily cleaning and practice of frequent hand hygiene. The district's return to school plan says the district's health team will work with state and local health officials to identify contacts to determine close contacts, the need to notify others in the classroom or program and the level of risk, noting that each situation is different and will be addressed on a case-by-case basis. Orono Public Schools started the 2020-2021 school year on 8 September, offering hybrid learning for full-time distance learning students. Weather update from Sven Sundaard Photograph: KSTP. Tommy Wiita Update: September 29, 2020 10:22 AM Created: September 29, 2020 A.M. Orono Intermediate School officials have announced that they are shifting to distance learning after four positive cases of COVID-19 were discovered in the learning community. According to the school's website, the transition from hybrid to distance learning will last for 14 days. The school says that people associated with has been instructed to stay at home if they have either received a positive COVID-19 diagnosis, are awaiting the results of COVID-19 tests or have been identified as close contact of a person with a confirmed case of COVID-19. Today, the district has made the very difficult decision to move students and staff at OIS from their current hybrid educational model to a distance learning model for 14 days, the statement said, in part. Here's how every school district on the subway holds classes this fall They noted that the decision was based on additional health data recently shared with the district, the number of staff members affected by Covid-19 quarantine protocols and, therefore, the inability to maintain hybrid classrooms in third through fifth grade with the correct student-to-space ratio and social distancing. This decision was not taken lightly. We are taking this action to protect the health and safety of our students, staff and families with the aim of returning our students to campus with the hybrid model as soon as possible, the statement said. The change will take effect on Tuesday and will go through October 9. For more information about the change and other frequently asked questions to the school, click here. Those who have tested positive for the virus are awaiting test results and have been identified as close contacts of someone with a confirmed case of COVID-19 had previously been asked to stay home. School at Orono Intermediate School was canceled Tuesday to give staff time to switch to distance learning. Classes will resume online on Wednesday, and the school plans to reopen to hybrid learning on Monday, October 12. The district notes that it could change depending on the state of COVID-19 in the school community and further guidance from the Minnesota Department of Health. Students at Orono Schumann Elementary, Orono High School and Orono High School are not affected by this and will continue in their current learning models, the letter notes. BMTN has reached out to Orono Public Schools for more information. This comes as some other districts in the state have been forced to turn to distance learning amid outbreaks within the school community, including schools in Brainerd, and as some of the state's largest districts in metro Twin Cities, which began the year with distance learning, are making plans to move to more classes in person.
