205/55 r16 rims

I found some reasonably light/cheap 16x7 wheels, 17.6 #, and want to go with 205/55/16. I'm worried that this wheel is a little too wide (visually) for this tire and it's going to be stretched. I prefer to find a 6.5 wheel aftermarket, but no luck so far. Reviews and/or front to back images of this combo? Also found some 15x6.5 rims, 15#, and am considering 205/60 for these. I really wanted to go to 16s. It should be perfectly ok to see the size of the view of performance. It measured wheel width from a 205/55x16 tire to 6.5, and a range of 5.5 to 7.0. Is the aftermarket wheels offset the same as the OE wheels? This is very important. I found some reasonably light/cheap 16x7 wheels, 17.6 #, and want to go with 205/55/16. I've got the Momo Winter tires for my snow tires. It's working fine. On the other rims, make sure that the factory-sized wheel screws (cone or angle) fit. I was screwed when I bought the drag ingress... had to use special wheel screws, which were not as thick or strong. Dang! blackout: There's nothing wrong with choosing a wheel and use the 205-55 on it (as long as the tire manufacturer lists that size in the mounting range). This is exactly the size we run on the MkIV in summer, and performance, the best option is 16. I also, let's just say not a series of forged BBS rims and a street car, just doesn't count as a street car. Last edited: October 29, 2011 my auto crossed 215s o an 8.5 inch wide tire.... everything is certain... Pop them up and enjoy. I just mounted some cheap of Falken 512 on 215/40/16 of my 7 slots 16x7. I'd go 215/50/16, but they are $50 each=-) They are just on the edge of looking stretched (which I don't like). I don't know if I want to a 205. I hear the width of the tire isn't always accurate depending on the tire company (205 isn't always 205mm). We'll see if they feel like I'm on the rails or not (I've never gone so small on the sideboard. I'll stop by and see what they look like. 205/55 on the 8X16s. It's never been a problem. I have 16x7 AudiTT rims and run 205/50-16s which didn't look stretched and currently run Pirelli P zero Neros in 205/45-16 which looks flat/'s square'. Also before the 5lug swap ran 15x7 rims on 205/50-15 also looked flat/square. The quality of the road was better than the lighter 15s than the heavier 16s. I think 205s of 7 rims are ideal aesthetically and treat. thanks for all the reponses, still speculating which 16x7 nip to go with..
