Conference participants are increasingly trying to create a once-in-a-lifetime experience versus a beeh and a swag. As a result, meeting planners book unique venues such as aircraft hangers, art museums and stadiums that can deliver an immersive conference experience. The demand for unique, flexible and immersive spaces will continue to increase for the foreseeable future. Meeting planners are looking for something their clients will remember a little more than your typical hotel ballroom, says Ryan Holmstedt, vice president of ticket sales & events for the Arizona Diamondbacks. They want the participants to come away and say, "That was amazing, I'll never forget it." In fact, 92 per cent of planners and property experts said they believe events are more likely to be booked outside the hotel than they were five years ago, according to CVENT. Downtown Phoenix's Chase Field, home to the Arizona Diamondbacks, is becoming increasingly popular among meeting planners because the stadium-located across the street from the Phoenix Convention Center-offers a unique meeting experience both on and off the field, Holmstedt explains. Everyone thinks of the field as a space that you can restore, he says. I'm sure you can do it, but there are other spaces. We have more space that with a little creativity can host a smaller event if your conference is not big enough for the area. Chase Field is home to a variety of lounges that can host various large meetings with an expansive ball field, or even a majestic view of phoenix as a backdrop. Events at Chase Field can be as elaborate as sponsoring a lunch on the field for 2,000 people, or as personal as dinner for 300 participants in the third base lounge followed by batting practice on the field. Not many people can say they've attended batting practice at a major league baseball park, says Holmstedt. It becomes an unforgettable event. Still, events don't have to be fantasies to be memorable. During the baseball season, conferences hosted all-day meetings in one of the lounges and then provided tickets to the game for all attendees, Holmstedt says. Inches On the baseball field, Chase Field offers meeting planners seven other options, including diamondbacks club house, which is only available in the off-season because it includes a tour of the locker room; Audi Lounge and Draft Room, both of which overlook the field; Legends Suites and Conference Center, offering incredible views of Phoenix; indoor/outdoor grill of game Seven; La Terraza, a Latin-themed space with colorful murals; and Plaza, which offers a wide open space with an outdoor, elevated stage. There are also several private apartments available for smaller meetings. In addition to batting practice, Chase Field also offers several one-of-a-kind experiences, including a behind-the-scenes tour, the appearance of team mascot D. Baxter Bobcat, Legends Racers, a World Series trophy, or the use of a scoreboard for conference programming. Even though we have these unique spaces, we are still a baseball stadium at our core. You need a little creativity to turn these spaces into perfect meeting settings, admits Holmstedt. You have to come up with an open mind and some creativity. Diamondbacks staff are available to create the perfect event to help meeting planners get their creative juices. We love taking what we know about baseball and applying it to corporate events, he says. For example, diamondbacks' in-house marketing team can help create signage and graphics that reinforce meeting key messages and an in-house caterer to help create unique menus. The ultimate goal is to engage attendees in a way that a typical ballroom or hotel room wouldn't, and increase the event and content so that people remember it, says Holmstedt. When you're able to provide great content and put it in a unique environment, it engages people. Our opinions, photos and love of baseball are 100% ours! This post contains affiliate links. We took the kids to their first Arizona Diamondbacks baseball game and we've been hooked ever since! Chase Field is surprisingly child friendly, with an indoor playground and miniature wiffle ball pitch. Children Also sign up for free Kid Club D-backs to win cool prizes every game you attend. Since my kids have a birthday in July, we are doing one big join sibling birthday party for them. I wasn't surprised when they both asked for a celebration at the Arizona Diamondbacks game and I couldn't wait to start brainstorming ideas for baseball's birthday party. I always start my birthday party planning on Etsy and this party was no exception. I found the most present baseball fabric reef from Grace N Merchandise on Etsy and knew it would do it for a cute and simple background. The Arizona Diamondbacks kindly offered us a private suite for our party, so all the decor had to be removable and transportable. Adorable baseball numbers have come from Redesign Accessories to Etsy. They made for some adorable photo definitely about my new 4 and 7 year olds! They would also look sweetheart in baseball with the thesis of a nursery or bedroom. My mom made cake and biscuits just like she does every year. She completely outsmpt herself with detailed sewing on a baseball hat and life-size fondant baseballs. Baseball scenes looked adorable on a bed with peanuts, and the kids devoured them. We were going to mix the cake idea this year due to the need for shipping in 110+ degree weather, but instead we opted for a faux cake. Yes, fondant decor was edible, but inside everything was polystyrene. I picked up edible cupcakes near the stadium and we had the best of both worlds! In addition, cupcakes are easier for children and did not include a fee for cutting in the apartment. I'll continue to do matching birthday shirts for as long as my kids let me, and couldn't wait to craft out a couple of baseball tees at a party! I found raglan shirts on Amazon and used my Cricut to reduce the heat transfer vinyl that I ironed on their shirts. The front specified their age in the baseball scenario and I put their names and numerical age on the back. I like how it turned out and if I had more time I would have crafted into a shirt for our entire party. They would do a favor for the cute party! worked great for a big party like ours. Private apartments also offer meals that you can arrange before the game or upon arrival, which is a good choice. For party favors, I put together bags that included baseball bouncing ball, baseball cards and baseball stickers. There are several different birthday party packages that diamondbacks have to offer. Each option contains a message for or a boy on a jumbotron. Unfortunately I missed photo to decide our kids' names on the screen, but it was a nice touch of D-backs! Baxter, the team's mascot, also fell into our suite and started a popcorn fight. He's pretty naughty, you better watch him. Of course, the kids absolutely loved him and thought it was the best surprise ever! The most epic birthday party ever ended with a bang, literally. The birthday girl and boy scored VIP passes to watch the fireworks from the field. I doubt that ever will top this party!
