[3] Plot In the Soul Society, Soul Reaper scientist Mayuri Kurotsuchi is attacked in his lab by a pair of mysterious brothers with a fallacy that erases their memories. In a panic scared, Kurotsuchi damages one of his machines, causing a massive burst of spirit energy covering much of the Soul Society, killing or freezing many soul reapers. Rukia Kuchiki is the next to be attacked by the brothers, erasing her memories and those of all who have memories of her, and is taken to the Rukon district of the Soul Society by the brothers. In the real world, one of Rukia's friends, Ichigo Kurosaki, briefly forgets him, but Kon, being a modified soul, is not affected by memory and reminds him. Ichigo and Kon go to the ancient soul reaper Kisuke Urahara for information; but Urahara does not remember Rukia. Ichigo and Kon travel to the Soul Society with all captains unable to remember Ichigo, believing he is a threat. Meanwhile, Rukia wakes up in rukon district with no memory of being a soul reaper. The unnamed brothers, a sister and a brother, remind Rukia that they used to be close friends who lived together and had to give them names, even though she has forgotten them. Ichigo seeks the help of Rukia's adopted brother, Byakuya, but does not remember Rukia either. After another confrontation with Renji Abarai, Rukia's friend, Byakuya directs his wife, Hisana, a birthplace, where they briefly reunite with Rukia before the brothers flee with her from Ichigo and Kon. Ichigo and Kon are attacked again by other soul reapers, but are saved by Renji Abarai, who follows his instinct to trust Ichigo. When the captain-in-chief of the Soul Society and other captains arrive to capture Ichigo, Urahara interferes. He sends Ichigo, Renji and Kon out to save Rukia, and tells the captains that he studied a parasitic void that could erase memories with his tentacle, but he escaped and appears to be influencing the brothers' actions to some extent. Meanwhile, the brothers go to Kurotsuchi's lab to completely destroy the Soul Reapers with another Kurotsuchi spiritual machine, under the belief that the Soul Reapers were responsible for taking Rukia away from them when they were younger. Rukia suddenly opposes this, and the arrival of Ichigo and Renji drives her to remind them of them and their past, both with the brothers and with their time as Soul Reaper. The female brother succumbs to rage, and she forces herself, her brother and Rukia to merge into one, creating Dark Rukia. Dark Rukia, apparently emptied, unleashes the machine on soul society before fighting Ichigo. The machine takes the form of a monster, and the soul reapers fight it. Ichigo fights Dark Rukia and is initially held back from injuring her. Byakuya arrives and claims that it should be he who ends this, but Ichigo intervenes and manages to free her with his own energy of similar spirit, destroying the Void; Byakuya and Renji also destroy the monster. Rukia recovers his memories, but the brothers are left mortally wounded, although they are unfortunate for their actions. Urahara arrives and explains that the Hollow attacked Rukia and the brothers while controlling the body of a Soul Reaper previously, but when the body was destroyed, the brothers trapped the Void in their bodies and were sent to Hueco Mundo — hollow's world – for a while, managing to escape to meet Rukia because of her desire to be with her. Rukia tells the brothers their names, Homura and Shizuku, but the two die from their wounds, much to Rukia's despair. Later, Ichigo asks Rukia at the shrine on the hill where he had previously visited, about the shrines were made in memory of his childhood friends who died during adolescence due to poverty, reminding him that his memories of the brothers will not fade away.
