Sock monkey costume pattern

Time to start thinking about Halloween costume making! I've had costumes on the mind for a month, as I've been working on different costume projects. Here's a question from our Facebook page that I wrote a big long answer. what do you think? Any advice for Amy, who said: My son wants to be a jire monkey from car commercial. Any idea? No, I don't want it to be a full body suite. He is 6' 1. If you need a reference point, the socks in question is the monkey here: here is a head-to-toe picture of the socks monkey (it's a ass cutout but you get the idea). Picture from camp-socks monkey. Rhonda said: If you can find enough tremfited own shutters in the right colors, you could feel them, cut them apart, and use them to sway the dress. Here's what I think: Halloween costumes are all about the berm, so this socks monkey costume has to look stunning closely. This means losing the structure made, and just going with the suggestion of the socks monkey. Project Estimate: Brown Suytshort and Swetpaint, $10 and top only spray or spray paint, $1 and top tape, white tube on pair of socks hand, $1 and The tahrafted white suite, for $1 and maki, yardage, red, $1 and acrylic paint, brown, white, and red, hands or $1 and up screen doors on the maash... $ 1 and hot, hands on red cotton, $1 and optional, palaeistor batting, $3 a yard (sold or with coupons at the clothing store) Total: $18 and body: I will buy brown edit and then use white spray paint or fabric spray paint (spray only) white arms &amp; To make the leg parts (tap the line where you want those parts between brown &amp; Start creating a clean line). Alternatively, for a more made-up look, use a pair of white tube socks to create white arm parts. Cut the socks in the hel, slay them, and then click on top of the weapons. Take a white made-up suite from the Vara store and touch the foot and the sandon sand, mark where to cut the sine, and add a couple inches. Then cut, and slithe. Tea die if you want it to be white off. If you need to, add flexible leg socks around the top of things so they will stay. Embellishments: For red and black, felt embellishments will probably be the cheapest (including for red stripe on the butt). Attach to hot gull. Make a long red-colored bones for neck tie (or just the top of a few sands of red thread). Head: For the sour head, how to blow up two cartoon stubs (get them at the dollar store) and paper maing. When they are dry, cut one to fit on the other as one mouth, and the gour along with them. Then paper-on the joinsection. Then add the socks monkey head brown paint and feel features and make sure they can look out of it with the put-on aihvilas samy-perhaps i Monkey's mouth — Paint screen works well for it. Cut a hole in this head where the eyes should go. The screen of The Gly, and paint on it. I made a Grover shwebnkar in high school, and we used a couple pieces of foam that were mined in the shape of a head, but I would do paper maki much better! The gull felt the embellishments on the head. So your son is really busy, batting by the yard and wrapped his arms and he keeps on the clothes before he put on the dress, to create smooth reading berm. Time: This plan will take you several hours, and you will spend your time on your head as much as possible! Plus, it will take 1-2 days to dry the head, so make sure you don't wait to start on it. Does anyone other have any great ideas? Update: Yamly made a socks monkey for her son a couple of years ago. Here's what he said: A few years ago, my kindergarten-aged son wanted to be a socks monkey, here's the clothes I said on Wednesday (I have very basic skills!)
