Exposure to areas such as the wrists, elbows, back of the ears, nods and the first of the neck is a top priority position in the use of perfumes due to the modesty and convenience of radiating scent. After use, you can spray the body with perfume and not rub or dry the skin with other items to break down layers of perfume, change the aroma or fly the smell fast. Put the perfume bottle about 15-20 cm away from the perfume location and, crucially, increase the grip of your skin so that the spilled bile of the perfume is widest. Scented wrists usually have many effects such as washing hands, wearing rings, wearing watches, etc., so it is recommended to use fragrances on the wrist more often than necessary to ensure that the fragrance is maintained.
