Battle of the Maze is Percy Jackson's fourth book and the Olympia series written by Rick Riordan. The story tells of Annabeth Chase as she leads her friends on a quest to find the inventor of the infamous maze when she discovers its role in a dark plot against the camp by Kronos's army. Plot Orientation The book begins with Percy Jackson going to freshman orientation classes at Goode High School, a school taught by her mom's boyfriend, Paul Blopis. There he meets Rachel Elizabeth Dare, a clear mortal who met at the Hoover Dam in the Curse of the Titans. During orientation, Rachel suddenly fled to the gym. Percy follows her, and she says something is wrong with her two cheerleaders, Tammi and Kelly. The people in question enter the gym and reveal themselves as bifuzai. Percy kills Tammi, but Kelly disappears in an explosion of fire. Unfortunately, Paul Blopis and other mortals see an incident that forces Percy and Rachel to escape through a broken window. They both run out to where Annabeth is waiting. Rachel asks percy to leave and explain everything when she has time. Percy then camps with Annabeth. When Annabeth arrives at the camp, she decides to talk to Clarisse La Rue about the secret and let Percy wander the camp by herself. He sees a huge hellhound, Mrs. O'Leary, who stop by the arena. He attempts to kill her, but is soon stopped by his new sword owner, Quinters, who says Mrs O'ary is his pet. Syron interrupts the conversation and brings Percy to Grover Underwood. He leads them to the gladness of being held by the Council of Elder Cloven and dropping him next to a crying nymph, Juniper, who turned out to be Annabeth, Clarice, and Grover's girlfriend. Mrs. O'ary. The council decides grover has only a week to find the fan, the lost God of the wild. Otherwise, his searcher's license will be forfeited. At the end of the meeting, Percy rushes to clean the cabin for in-flight inspection. Upon arrival at poseidon hut, he sees his half-brother Tyson cleaning up. Tyson cuddles him and shows him a bankruptcy repair shield last winter during his fight with Samanti Core. That night, Percy has trouble sleeping. He realizes that the room is shining with a faint blue light coming from the saltwater fountain his father gave him last winter. Its surroundings are iridescent light, apparently an Iris message. He put one drachma in the fog and sparkles until Nico D'Angelo's painting becomes clear. Nico is Ask if there is a way to bring Bianca D'Angelo back to life. The ghost replies that it is possible, but it becomes a soul for the soul only if an exchange occurs. Percy's vision disappears before it's time to put in another drachma. In his head is the inexorable idea that Nico will come looking for him. The next morning, in a quintus-designed camp game, Annabeth and Percy are attacked by three giant scorpions. They try to find a place to hide and squeeze between the two rocks. Note that they must be tunnel entrances. When they came out of the entrance, it turned out that they had actually found a maze, a magical underground maze, the entrance under Zeus's fist in the heart of the camp. Annabeth explains that this is central to Clarice's secret mission during the Titan curse to find the entrance to the labyrinth. She also explains that Luke Castellan plans to use it as an invasion route. File: 60px-Percykatoon.jpg Percy Jackson, one of the members of quest. Maze Annabeth, along with Percy, Grover and Tyson, search for The Maze's creator, Daedalus. As soon as the crowd enters the maze, they move the walls, narrow the passageways, and close the exits and entrances. They are made into Roman-style rooms where they can find the petty god Janus. He gives Annabeth a key to one of the doors behind him. He is forced to choose her when she is saved by Hera, queen of Olympus. She said she postponed Annabeth's choice, adding that the real reason for her visit was to offer them a wish. Annabeth wants a way to navigate the maze. Hera replies that she wants what has already been given before she disappears. They leave the room and go inside Alcatraz, rescuing the ancient backhand one Bryares from Campe. The group attempts to persuade Briares to join him, but one hundred hands is so disappointed by the years of imprisonment he refuses. The group can't do anything as they move deeper within the maze. While in the labyrinth, Percy continues to dream about Daedalus, including how the old inventor's son, Icarus, dies, and how he indirectly kills his nephew Purdix. Triple G Ranch They meet Nico D'Angelo at four Triple G ranches. Percy makes a deal with Gerion to let Percy and his friend (including Nico) go when Percy cleans the stables of man-eating horses. Percy succeeds in finding all her friends bound and gagged. Gerion reminds us that the deal is void because Percy didn't swear on the Stykes River. Percy shoots Hera's guided arrow sideways and beats her three hearts to defeat Gerion. Nico refused to leave with them, and they summoned the ghost of Bianca D'Angelo, it turns out She was sending Percy Iris messages about Nico's plans. Bianca asks Nico to forgive Percy because his death was not his fault. She provides the last words of warning about the fatal defects of Hades's children before disappearing (holding a grudge) before disappearing. Nico still refuses to leave with Percy and his friends, and Eurytion offers to let him stay for a while. Hefaeus's Forge Glassion helps find Hefaeustus, who helps find his way to the workshop in Daedalus, providing spider automatons to help lead them to the god of forging. Back in the maze, the foursome are estheted with the Sphinx. He then meets Hefaestes and says he will only reveal everything he wants to know about Daedalus if he learns why, who invades his forgery at Mount St. Helens. The four begin to travel toward forgery when Grover senses the presence of a fan. Four splits. Percy continues her quest with Annabeth, while Tyson is accompanied by Grover. Percy and Annabeth learn who the creatures use Hefaethus's Ges are. As they scout the area, Percy is discovered by Telekin and he is forced to repel them. He asks Annabeth to get out of there and report back to Hefaethus. To Percy's surprise, Annabeth kisses him because she believes Percy might die. The 13-year-old Percy summons water from the inside to defeat the monster, but the resulting explosion causes him to shoot into the air as he loses consciousness. When Calypso Percy comes, he finds himself on a ghostly island called Ogizia. Percy meets Atlas's daughter, a girl named Calypso, and a titan. He gives her an immediate charm, and she in turn falls in love with him and gives her the choice to stay with him, become immortal or leave to help her friends. She gives Percy time to consider this. Hefaeus visits them and personally explains to Percy what happened at Mount St Helens. He noted that the energy percy unleashed actually caused an earthquake that could wake Typhon, and he left behind Percy's determination to return to the world. But Hefaeus gives Percy a clear hint of how to navigate the maze, and he disappears into a fire pit. Percy makes a decision and decides to tell Calypso his choice at dawn. His decision to return doesn't surprise Calypso. Before leaving, she gives him the twigs of the moon planted in Manhattan for her. She sends him on his way back to camp by giving him a magical raft to sail, and when he travels the sea, he can't help but think she will always be the biggest 'what-if'. Return to Maze Percy and return to the camp to find it empty. He approaches the amphitheatre and it becomes apparent that his burial cover is on fire and everyone exists. He sees Annabeth makes it back and makes his appearance. Annabeth creates a scene, but the whole camp is relieved that he's alive. Percy tells Syron and Annabeth of his plans after finding out the hints Hefaeosto gave him, and soon the two campers head into mortality to find a man who can guide them in the maze: Rachel Elizabeth Dare. Rachel dared. The trio return to the maze to find Daedalus's workshop and Grover and Tyson. Rachel reveals how she can see the right path with dim brightness on the floor. They are suddenly captured by Luke's army and led to the arena of Poseidon and Gaia's son, Anterius, while Percy sees Luke and the rest of his army. Luke knows the pitch is part of the way, and it becomes clear that it provides Anteus entertainment in the form of gladiator fights to get through. Because they share the same legacy through their father, Anterius has a special interest in Percy. The latter is given a turn to fight on the pitch against another banfi, Edan Nakamura. Percy clearly has the upper hand, but he refuses to kill Edd. This forces Anteus to fight directly with percy, who is enraged. Percy defeats Anteus through deception and wit. Luke orders the army to be killed, but Percy summons Mrs. O'Lyrie using the Stydian ice whistle that Quintus previously gave her. The three escape with Ethan, but Ethan leaves as soon as he is away from the stadium. The group soon arrives at the workshop in Daedalus and discovers Quintus, who identified himself as Daedalus. They only had a conversation with him, but he had already made up his mind to help Luke, who gave him a string of ariadne, magical items that could help them navigate the maze. Their conversation is cut short when Kelly Virpusa, king of Minos — the greatest enemy of Daedalus and the ghost who pretends to help Nico -- and some of the other adversaries arrive with Nico in tow. Daedalus, the trio, and Nico fight monsters. Mrs. O'Errie appears and helps them. Daedalus told the four men to flee, and they used his improved metal wings to flee to mortality. Rachel could return to them a maze. They stumble across a tunnel where Percy is believed to be the entry of the Titan Palace. Fearing for the safety of others, he goes into the hall. Inside, he finds a golden sarco crown, opens it and is shocked that it's not Kronos, but it's Luke who's inside. Percy speculates that Kronos should have fused with Luke. He stays long enough to see Edan loyal to Kronos, holding a telekin holding Kronos's sickle watch. Kronos wakes up and Percy runs away from him, but Kronos stops time. Suddenly, Rachel throws a hairbrunning in titan's face. Luke shouts But as Nico summons a black stone wall, Kronos regains control, and the four give him time to escape. File:Fan2.jpg, Lost God. Percy says Luke has become completely evil, but Annabeth doesn't believe this when she sees that Rachel is Luke who cried when she hit him with a hairrunner. Percy chats with Rachel, but is startled to see Grover's hat lying on the floor. Hats lie near the tunnel entrance, and four push them farther. There they find Tyson and the unconscious Grover. They were able to wake Grover, and the six finally enter Carlsbad Caves in New Mexico, fan's final haven. God asks Grover to spread the word that a fan is truly dead because his domain is too compromised to store. Grover refuses at first, but eventually gives up. Fans are handled individually with each address except Nico. The fan finally melted, a small curl of white mist entered the six, Grover getting a little more than the others. They make it out of the maze and Rachel says to Percy that she's a very rich land developer who explains why her father could quickly get back on the ride back into the maze, and why she felt guilty for the passing of the fan. Percy reassured him that it wasn't his fault, he said. Soon the three campers and Nico fly back to the camp in Pega city. Return to the camp and go back in time to see the camp preparing for four wars. Percy and Siron can talk for a while before Kronos's army explodes in the maze. The campers, along with Satie, Nymph and Siron, do their best to stop the enemy. Grover panics, and when the fan's gift comes out, the odds of the enemy returning to the maze are stacked. The asses know that the monsters will soon return, and they begin to regroup. To save the camp, Daedalus chooses to end his life and labyrinth. Before he died, he gives Annabeth a sleek silver laptop that includes all the ideas and notes he never had a chance to continue. Nico released him, the labyrinth was destroyed, and the camp was saved. Nico D'Angelo. After dinner, Percy catches Nico as if the latter is about to leave. Nico apologizes to Percy for being such a brat, and Percy forgives him. Percy gives Nico a place in the camp, but Nico says he can't accept it in any place and can't be with the dead. Percy knows Nico needs to find his way, so he can leave him. At the end of the summer, Percy reveals the remaining prophecies to Annabeth. Hera suddenly appeared, and both she of the family, she just cares about the perfect family. Hera remembers this insult and replies that it will disappear. Percy returns home to celebrate her 15th birthday with her mother Paul and Tyson. Poseidon arrives for Percy's birthday, and Percy explains everything to him. Poseidon gives Percy a sand dollar before leaving, saying he is his favorite son. Nico suddenly appears and claims to have found a way to beat Kronos. Percy discusses how nicely Nico looks at birthday food and invites him inside for food and stories. Prophecy The prophecy of the book is given to Annabeth Chase: you explore in the darkness of endless mazes, the dead, the traitors, and the lost sips. You will rise or fall by the hands of the ghostly king, the child of Athena's last stand. Destroy with the hero's last breath and lose love worse than death. The prophesying Annabeth and her group are going into a labyrinth. Nico raises the dead, Edan Nakamura joins Kronos after Percy saved his life, and Grover succeeds in finding the fans (the dead, the traitors, the lost). Nico calls himself the Ghost King during a battle in a workshop in Daedalus and decides to save the lives of Percy and Annabeth. Daedalus decides whose side to side with. Daedalus is willing to die for the destruction of the maze (both are interconnected). Luke gives his body as a host of kronos.
