One of my favorite things about Five Nights at Freddy's is that it's a very fast paced game... And it's exciting because of the different characters you play like. I like to think of myself as a savant player and the game allows me to really enjoy my game and think about my actions while I'm playing. It's a great feeling to be a part of the community of gamers who enjoy their favorite video games and share their knowledge and ideas about how to have fun with them. Robot behavior at night has become somewhat unpredictable and much cheaper if you're a security guard than a repair shop. From your little office fee, keep an eye on the security cameras. You have very limited electricity use per night (cut your corporate budget, you know). This means if you lose power in the night - no security doors and no more lights! If something goes wrong, that is, if Freddiebear or his friends are not in the right place, you need to find them on the monitor and defend yourself if necessary! Are you going to survive five nights with Freddie? Considering the ease of control and gameplay, Five Nights at Freddie's is fantastic. This is a great example of how clever design and subtlety can be used to create an awesome experience.
