The bravery of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor helped save countless lives. Miller was born in Waco, Texas, on October 12, 1919. He worked on the family farm with his three brothers until September 16, 1939, when Miller enlisted in the Navy to earn extra money for the family. Miller finished training at a naval training base in Norfolk, Virginia, where he was promoted to female attendant third class. This was one of the only positions available to African Americans at the time because of the separation of the Navy. Following his promotion, Miller was handed over to the USS Pyro and served as a confused attendant before being transferred to the USS West Virginia in 1940. Miller became the ship's heavyweight boxing champion and earned the respect of his compatriots. On December 7, 1941, Miller started working early. As he began collecting the ship's laundry, an alarm from General Quarters sounded. Miller raced inside his combat station, The To-Air Battery Magazine. But when he got to his position, he found it destroyed by a torpedo. Miller returned to the deck and was assigned to help carry his fellow injured sailors to safety because of his physical prowess. He carried several men to safety and then regained the ship's injured captain, Marvin Bennion. Miller then fired an unmanned .50 caliber Browning anti-aircraft machine gun until he ran out of ammunition before being ordered to abandon the ship without resting. When asked how he fired with such prowess, Miller replied, It wasn't difficult. I just pulled the trigger and she worked fine. I was looking at other people with these guns. I think I fired her for about 15 minutes. I think I got oneJap plane. They were diving near us. The USS West Virginia sank to the bottom of the harbor. Of the ship's 1,541 people, 130 were killed and 52 injured. For his actions, Miller was honored by Navy Secretary Frank Knox on April 1, 1942. On May 27, 1942, he was awarded the Navy Cross by Pacific Fleet Commander Chester W. Nimitz Fleet Commander. On November 24, 1943, a Japanese torpedo struck the USS Liscombe Bay off Britality Island. Two-thirds of the crew died or went missing (including Miller). Doris Miller's legacy has opened the way for other African-American service members to play combat roles. And his similarity was used in navy recruitment drives, including iconic World War II enlistment posters featuring the words above and beyond the call of duty. In addition to the Navy Cross, Doris Miller was awarded the Purple Heart, the U.S. Defense Forces Medal - Fleet Clasp, the Asia-Pacific Campaign Medal and the World War II Victory Medal. In 1973, the Knox-class frigate USS Miller was named in his honor. We respect his service. More information on Miller's services can be found at justice activist/Doris-(Dolly) Miller. And even after a little research, sometimes in a world that encompasses the celebrity world or the rest of civilization, relationships are difficult to decipher and maintain. Pete Davidson and Ariana Grande Last May, Ariana appeared on Saturday Night Live and Pete Davidson is a regular cast on the show. After that show, Ariana and Pete were seen hanging out at the after-party. Ariana had ended her two-year connection to Mac Miller. Pete revealed that he had split with Larry David's daughter, Cazzie David. Are you still following all of this? By the end of May, Ariana and Pete were considered items, despite casual dating items. But they had already got a matching tattoo, so it must have seemed a more serious relationship for the two than the public. At least the small cloud tattoos on the fingers were small. The following month, Pete appeared around town with an AG tattoo on his left thumb, and the words on the street were that the two were engaged. More tattoos, more squirts, rings, and everything was peachy. But anything that shoots into the sky and explodes into all colors of the rainbow must crash. Pete Davidson was left reeling.
