He also talked about what fans can expect to see in the season finale. This season, there's some great stuff. Heughan said on the outing. The Revolutionary War is fast approaching. The finale, this season, is probably our strongest yet. It's very stylized and quite different. The producers of This Is Us hinted a little back that we would spend a lot of time with Jack in Vietnam this season, and tonight's gruelling episode certainly made good on that promise. Milo Ventimiglia's prominence and set entirely in the past, Vietnam finally begins to fill some gaps when it comes to Jack's military service, and his relationship with his brother Nicky. There was a lot to work out, so here are six key things you may have missed. This content is imported from [embed name]. You may be able to find the same content in another format, or you may be able to find more information on their website. NBC Kevin contacted a man named Mr. Robinson last week, asking for information about Jack. Tonight, we met the young Don Robinson (Mo McRae), a soldier who served alongside Jack in Vietnam and shared a relationship with him along with some good-natured rivalry. As soon as Don started talking about his post-Vietnam dreams of playing baseball, you should know something awful was coming and we're not sure we'll ever recover from the sight of Jack giving Don his own severed leg.2 The wounded soldier Jack was holding on to the season premiere was not Nicky.When Rebecca asks Jack about the war on their first date and downplays how awful it was telling her he was 'just an engineer, we saw a quick look at one Jack holding someone in his arms. Since the shooting came just before nicky mentioned, many viewers assumed we were seeing a glimpse of the brother's death scene. But this episode includes the full version of that moment, which sees Jack cradling Don after His leg. Which means we have no idea how Nicky's going to die, or if Jack's going to be there with him when he dies, or even if he's really dead. If there's one thing this has taught us, it's to question everything!3. Don taught Jack how to breathe. One of the most touching recurring motifs throughout the show has Jack teaching Randall how to breathe through his panic attacks-remember the gut-wrenching scene when Randall did the same for William in his dying moments? Unsurprisingly, Jack didn't learn this technique from his own father. Instead, he learned it from Don, who (despite having just lost a limb) takes a moment to comfort Jack as he is about to be medically evacuated. You're scared, Pearson, Don tells Jack, asking if he's ever tired of acting like he's not. In response, Don puts a hand on the side of Jack's face and tells him to breathe, telling him sometimes we're so afraid that we're going to die, we forget to do what keeps us alive. Jack apparently carried it with him, and years later he taught it to his son. That was so emotional! NBC 4. Jack wasn't drafted, but he volunteered to be with Nicky. Jack had a medical exemption that meant he avoided the plan (more on that in a second), but Nicky's number came. Jack has always been incredibly protective of his little brother-Nicky only half-ironically referring to himself as Lois Lane to Jack's Superman-and so he immediately comes up with a plan to get Nicky to Canada to avoid going to war. But on the way, Nicky walks out of their motel room in the middle of the night, leaving a note explaining that he's not leaving the draft. It's my turn to save the day, he writes. But Nicky still needs salvation, at least as far as Jack's concerned. A letter arrives from Nicky that shows he's not well in Vietnam-he's disciplined, and he writes disturbing phrases like I know I'm not getting out of this place alive-and so Jack has to go and find him. I just have to be where he is, even if I can't reach him, he tells his doctor. Even if there's nothing I can do for him, I just have to be there. He's my little brother. It's my job to take care of him. 5. Jack had a long history of heart problems before his sudden death. As we all know painfully well by now, it was not the house fire that directly killed Jack, but a heart attack caused by smoke inhalation. And as it turns out, there were warning signs. Jack had tachycardia (an unusually fast heart rate) from his childhood, and was severe enough to rid him of the pattern. degrades the condition as harmless when he decides to enlist, but his doctor is clearly concerned. 6. Jack's father wasn't always a monster. Nbc Nbc it was a pleasant surprise because Stanley Pearson has been a beautiful one-note villain throughout most of the show. On the one hand, this episode offered far more poignant details of how abusive He was to his wife and children, making it clear that his violence is a big part of why Jack is so protective of Nicky. There's also a violent scene in which Marilyn, Jack and Nicky's mom, greeted the postman with a very visible bruise over her eye. It wasn't always like that, Marilyn tells her sons, as they both intervene to physically protect her from Stanley. And it's true: In a flashback to the day Nicky was born, Stanley is sweet and supportive, offering fatherly advice to Jack in the waiting room. The appearance of Stanley's father, flask in hand, hints at some of his demons-yet, you have to wonder what the hell happened over the next two decades to turn him into such a horrible man. I guess we'll have to wait and find out! This content is created and maintained by third parties and is inserted into this page to help users provide their email addresses.
