Many Minnesota counties keep records in digital (computer-readable) format, while others keep them as paper records. Note that the limits displayed on the maps and GIS records are approximate -- they are not a substitute for certified real estate surveys, legal property descriptions, or detailed map maps. For more information on real estate surveys and legal see the Minnesota Society of Professional Surveyors website (choose About Surveyunder the About MSPS menu). Property records can also be used as parcels, parcels, Real estate or real estate records. If you know other data sources that could be added to this section, please send us an email! Not sure which county your town or municipality is in? Use our city/district search page to find out. Downloadable records: These records require geographic information system (GIS) software. Online package maps and information: These county websites allow the public to view real estate information online. Some information may be password-protected or available only by subscription. GIS County Contact Information: Contacts and County Mapping Sites. Survey & Land Management Information: This brochure from the Minnesota Department of Transportation Department of Transportation's Office of Land Management describes package-related information available from MnDOT. Plat books: These books typically cover a county and display land boundaries, owner names and land, and other reference information such as roads and municipal section numbers. They are not intended for legal use in sales, transactions or land transfers. Plat books can be viewed in many libraries; They can also be ordered from the publishing house, at ticket and bookstores and at some district offices. Copyright restrictions may prohibit the copying of new books. Hunting on land sites: Because hunters often ask for land ownership information, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has compiled a list of proposals for finding public and private land ownership, including maps showing the boundaries of wildlife management areas, state and federal forests, and national wildlife conservation areas.
