View sources share Augustus Gus Jackson will first appear in Season 5 as a Contactable SluggerJackson working at Station House Five participating in a Toronto Constabulary baseball tournament played by Christian Bruun. The character Arc is first drunk but considered a great baseball player, and he is used as a pawn by station house inspectors in an elaborate web of deception, that's when it turned out he is a lovely bloke. In Season 6, Jackson becomes a re-emerging character. In Season 8, Constable Jackson plays a trumpet (ep.803), but he learns that he can't sing Sewing once for Murdoch's Christmas. In seasons 9 and 10, it was revealed that he comes from a large family who love Christmas and celebrate Christmas in a big way. Given that there are 11 of us in the family, it takes some time, so we draw a lot to see who chooses the first. It takes up the first part of the morning... When we open all the gifts, the whole family has a winter walk. Of course, it is not the same without eyes. And as soon as we return, we all indulge in her sister's fantastic plum pudding. Jackson doesn't like Slorak's cabbage rolls (ep.801) or Detective Watt's (big soft) pretzels, Jackson explains, and I'm not interested in anything unusual. (ep.1012) It was revealed that he was married: After closing the office door, he was det. I confide in Watts. She died in my arms. (ep.1012) Jackson reveals to medical student Ann Baxter that his wife died of drops. (ep.1013) Soon, he tells her to call her Gus and romance begins. Along with the season finale Pay in Hell, Constable Higgins and George, Jackson was caught in an ambush and all three Constants were shot. In the ashes from the season 11 premiere, it was revealed that Jackson was actually killed in an ambush at a church. He was buried under witness by Detective Murdoch and Detective Watt and at last received a tribute at Station House No. 4 by George, Henry and Prosecutor Brackenrid. At the top of the Merlo mystery, share with GeorgeMerdock, sir, when the station returns to normal without Housejackson,... I think he did what he loved, died for the cause he believed in, for the cause that you and I continue to serve. I think he would have wanted it. Winston's Lost Night Jackson was on patrol when he spotted Winston Churchill and his friend beating up from an Irish mob, an appearance and a lost night in Yonston. He immediately sang rule Britannia and thus provoked the mob and arrested them; He later releases them after the bar closes with a warning about singing again.
