100 deadly skills survival edition pdf

I was hoping not to deal with discussing active shooters (Skill #073) or other armed aggressors, but recent events in Paris and San Bernardino, California, make these pertinent. Those of us who do not wannabes will be relieved to know that people find themselves in such dire situations can often be saved by emerson's commonsense tips that do not require the response of burning guns, at least not from civilians. Only The Expert Prosperity of All, notes that the skills advertised in the book are deadly - but not for the reasons you think. The skills documented here aren't actually meant to kill anyone; rather, they are designed to keep you alive. The writer, Clint Emerson, is a retired Navy SEAL specializing in security. He was even on the elite SEAL Team Six. If you know any SEALs, or have read about their training, then you know they are the hardest of the Only The Strong Survive. Only The Expert Prosperity of All, notes that the skills advertised in the book are deadly - but not for the reasons you think. The skills documented here aren't actually meant to kill anyone; rather, they are designed to keep you alive. The writer, Clint Emerson, is a retired Navy SEAL specializing in security. He was even on the elite SEAL Team Six. If you know any SEALs, or have read about their training, then you know they are the hardest of the difficult. In other words, these 100 Lethal Skills are not the theories of a man sitting at a desk - they are methods used by the author in deadly serious circumstances. Clint makes it clear right off the bat that your own preparation is key: The only elements of crisis under our control are our own preparation and response. (When I read this, I immediately thought of the famous Douglas MacArthur ad saying, Preparation is key to success and victory.) So while the points are called Skills, they are just as much about preparation. You might be tempted to dismiss the ideas here as too extreme, or even stupid. I DIDN'T think the ideas were stupid (well, okay, I skipped #14, Escaped a Wild Attack.) Of course, some of the ideas will not apply to many people. If you don't take cruises, you can also take #44, Defend a ship against Pirates. Some of the ideas, however, hit close to home, and really made me think. Idea #3, Prepare a vehicle go-bag go-bag you have a personal survival kit in my car: Collect everyday carrying items that promote safety and survival... A basement full of emergency supplies is an excellent starting point for disaster preparation, but the trunk of your car is an underutilized resource. I thought the points in these divisions were excellent. Why not put my car trunk to good use? Each of the 100 Ideas includes a discussion of the concept, detailed, instructions and illustrations. For each deadly idea, there is also a succinct summary of the points. For example, here's the summary for #22 Find drinking water in a barren desert. + Follow the signs of water. + Get on high ground, carefully observe environment. + Find dry streams and Find animals and riverbeds: dig for water, their tracks. + Find vegetation: water loving, broad-overlet plants and trees. + Look for swarms of flies, mosquitoes and bees.+ Dig into dry riverbeds and under vegetation. I found these summary points to be a valuable wrap-up of every idea. To make my reading more efficient, I found it most useful to scan the table of contents for ideas relevant to me. So, for example, I told #14, Escape a wild peasant attack. I hardly ever see wild boars in San Francisco. And honestly, I seriously doubt I could skin and eat a snake (Idea #24, Skin from head to tail. Cook thoroughly.) But others, I've spent a lot of time studying - like those about home security and home invasions. Just about everyone can benefit from the deadly skills to protect your home. For example, building rapport with your neighbors is one of the most important things you can do to protect your home. Honestly, that point never occurred to me. Here's another one: If you have a surveillance camera, make sure it's properly focused: A camera focused now on a walkway or door will have a much better chance of delivering results. Good point. It didn't happen to me that too broad of a focus would make it difficult to identify the crooks. Finally, here's a good idea, to use if you're lost and the police looking for you. On your Smartphone, you've probably turned off Location Services. Well, if you do, it makes it harder for the police to find you. So, Turn on location services in your general settings to enable law enforcement authorities to locate your phone. Wow. Probably other readers have already thought about this, but I confess I haven't. All in all, I found 100 deadly skills to be a fun, useful book. I enjoyed scouring through the many ideas. While many of the skills don't apply to me, there was a lot that did, and the suggestions on offer were valuable. Some fit my circumstances, and others - well, no, I just can't see myself skin that Advance Hersiening Copy permit from Edelweiss. ... More... More More
