David with Abishai left camp Saul, then, crossing the deep gorge, re-ascended opposite the hill or the mountain - there was then a deep chasm between him and the camp Saul, then, crossing the deep gorge, re-ascended opposite the hill or the mountain from which David spoke was far away, not as we should say, as crow flies, but far away, because a deep steep gorge lay between the camp saul and the ground on which David and Abishai stood. On the previous occasion when David, in a gedi cave, the son of Jesse cut off the skirt of the royal garment, David wept fearlessly to Saul as the king was still apparently quite close to the cave. Now, however, he seems to have counted far less on any change in the state of Saul's mind than he had before . . . In fact, he instead feared that Saul would try to get him into his power when he woke up from sleep. Verses 13-16. - The top of a hills. Hebrew, the top of the hill, the special mountain on which David had reconnoitred Saul's camp (ver. 5). A great room between them. By En-gedi, Saul was alone, and had placed himself in the power of David; he had therefore followed him closely. Here Saul had his army around him, and David had entered his camp by stealth. That's why it's not until he had placed a large interval between them that he calls to Abner, and asks in mockery, Aren't you a man? The irony is served by the insertion of the word tapper (comp. 1 Samuel 4:9). No special bravery was necessary; any worthy name of the man should have guarded his master better. Who is like you - In Israel? Among all saul's subjects, there was no one as powerful and highly placed as commander-in-chief, and he should have proved worthy of his primacy. With reason, to neglect his duty and expose the king to danger, he and his people were worthy to die. Hebrew, sons of death (see 1 Samuel 20:31). Finally, David asks him to look for the king's spear and water bottle, so he can understand how complete Saul had been in his power. It has been suggested that Abner was probably a personal enemy of David, as he could never have held the high position that he occupied with his close relative Saul. Possibly instead of discouraging Saul from pursuing David, he aroused his bad feelings. Still, there is absolutely nothing in this banter that was not justified by Abner's official position. Parallel comments ... LexiconDes David, he aroused his bad feelings. Lord.—Better restored, far from the presence of the Lord. The same thought that lived in the last verse is here magnified. If this brutal persecution continues, David goes on to say, sooner or later I shall fall a victim to some of the myriad dangers as one in my situation, as the leader of a group of outlaws, is daily exposed. Let not so hard, cruel fate be mine – to die a violent death far away from the land that Jehovah loves. It was the same thought that inspires so touching this last prayer he gave to Saul, who has ever been present in his heart, made up bringing up the Ark to a permanent sanctuary, where the visible symbol of eternal presence would dwell forever, the dream of David's life. It was the same sacred thought that induced him to spend so much time and to set up such large shops for the construction of a glorious sanctuary. The passionate longing of the man after God's own heart to worship his eternal master in a fitting house devoted to his service, and in the company of men who loved and honored the namename, is to be found in some of the most soul-searching of his hymns. To seek a flea.--The same humiliating comparison he had made once before on a similar occasion again happens for him. Such repetition is of common occurrence, as we know, both in speeches and writings. The LXX. here substitute for a flea my soul, probably with the aim of avoiding the repetition of the simile of a flea, which David had made use of on the previous occasion of his saving king's life on En-gedi.A partridge in the mountains.-The LXX. unnecessarily changes partridge to scream-owl, and changes his sanity: as scream-owl hunts on the mountain. The meaning of simile in the Hebrew original is well given by Erdmann, in Lange: The isolated from god's people, far from all association, a fugitive from their plots on the mountain heights, you seek at all costs to destroy, as one hunts a single fugitive partridge on the mountain, only to kill at all costs, while otherwise, from its insignificance, it would not be hunted, since partridges should be found in the field of lust. Conder (Tent Life in Palestine) tells us especially that partridges should be found in the field of lust. Conder (Tent Life in Palestine) tells us especially that partridges should be found in the field of lust. wild goats, the ibex bands can still be seen delineated, and partridge is still chased on the mountain, when David was followed by the creeping hunter Saul. Verse 20. - Do not let my blood fall to earth until jehovah's face. Hebrew, far from Jehovah's presence. The point of David's appeal is not that his life can be spared, but that he cannot thus be driven far away from the land where Jehovah manifests himself; Nor does he seem so much to think Sauls to put him to death as the likelihood that sooner or later the life of an exile will be cut short by some of the many dangers with which he is surrounded. A flea. Hebrew, a single flea, as in 1 Samuel 24:14. A partridge. Many emendations of the text have been suggested on the assumption that partridges are only to be found in the plains. But Mr. Condor tells us that partridges are among the few living creatures that still rent these wildernesses; and when he talks about the precipitous cliffs that hang over the Dead Sea, he says, here, among the stones of the wild goats, the flocks of ibex can be seen borders, and partridge is still chased on the mountain, as David was followed by the creeping hunter Saul ('Tent Work,' 2:90: see also 1 Samuel 23:19). Parallel comments ... LexiconSo י (disambiguation) at tah)Subjunctive waw | AdverbStrongs Hebrew 408: Notlet my blood of man, an animal, the juice
