After all, red is the undisputed color of passion, conveying love and romance are the color of the flowers delivered to your door as a sweet surprise from your partner or the tone of your wedding bouquet. Not only do these beautiful petals evoke the Christmas spirit of Valentine's Day (not cheesy), but red wedding bouquets can really make the romance at their wedding no matter the time of year. There are endless ways to create your berry bouquet. You can opt for something incredibly statement-making, brimming with crimson flowers and overflowing with vegetation. You can also go for a more temperamental look by choosing flowers in dark red tones (think ox blood dahlias and burgundy peonies). Or if you're looking for a more discreet or summery environment, consider a mix of red and white flowers that feels fresh and bright. And with many of the prettiest wedding flowers available in red tones, you can present almost any flower you like and still create the perfect ruby bouquet. Use classic roses, garden roses, peonies, clematis, anemones or ranunculus for your red details. Another advantage of losing a red bouquet on your big day? It will really explode against your wedding dress, especially if you plan to get married in the fall or winter (hello stunning snowy wedding photos). With little or no color to compete in its backdrop, its red bouquet will take center stage. Scroll below to see 22 examples of beautiful red bouquets.
