Advanced integration details, examples, and help! The functions  $f(x)$  and  $g(u)$  are equivalent because they have the same function with different variables ( $f$  gives the result in the form of  $x$ , while  $g$  gives it in the form of  $u$ ). If the variable is specified by a different letter, the function does not change. In other words, the two functions provide the same output for the same input.
