We look forward to seeing everyone on A-Day 2021! We want to thank again all the students, staff and sellers who have devoted so much time and energy to A-Day, only to have it cancelled due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Day of the Day is a long-standing tradition and we will be back together safely again in 2021. A-Day, which means Activity Day, is a family friendly event organized and managed by Delaware Valley University students to take advantage of campus activities and clubs. This three-day event brings together the campus and surrounding community for educational exhibits, competitions, entertainment, entertainment, and great food like thick, homemade milkshakes and delicious funnel cakes. The first A-day was held May 21, 1949 on the campus of the National Agricultural College. At that time, A-Day was a day when college students worked together to show various agricultural exhibitions and exhibits. Today, the tradition continues with hard work and dedication to students from Delaware Valley University. The whole event is planned and implemented by students with minimal guidance from the staff of the university, faculty and administration. Since 2004, he has been part of the Ernie County State Association in Pennsylvania. Members of the university and the local community are invited to enter their food products, works of art or crafts to evaluate the fair. PET Policy While we love animals here at Delaware Valley University, we ask you to leave your pets at home for the day. This is a policy due to concerns about biosecurity and the health of our animals. Thank you to the 2020 A-day team! A screen shot from the video Expanding Delaware's history of Bishop Richard Allen. department in cooperation with the The information center, the short videos of varying lengths, feature community members and department employees telling the stories of individuals whose lives are invaluable in understanding Delaware's complex history. Each new video will be published every day from 3 p.m. from December 2 and ends on December 6, 2020. In honor of Delaware Day, a collection containing all five videos will be published at 3 p.m. on Monday, Dec. Access to the videos is free and open to the public. Delaware Day honors the anniversary of the creation of Delaware, which was the first state to ratify the U.S. Constitution on December 7, 1787. Traditionally, day-to-day activities have focused on the constitution's five delaware signatories - Richard Bassett, Gunning Bedford Jr., Jacob Butt, John Dickinson and George Read. As members of the remarkable group of men who founded the United States, their lives and achievements have been celebrated and well documented in historical records. In 2020, however, the division seeks to expand the Delaware Day narrative by enlightening the lives of five other people who contributed to delaware's dynamite history and early statehood and whose stories deserve to be told and preserved - Dina, James Summers, Bishop Richard Allen, Warner Mifflin and an unnamed black man who was one of the first people of African descent who lived in Delaware. In creating these videos, division director Tim Slavin noted that we strive to practice inclusive history and will not shrink from, or ignore, the pain of our shared heritage. We are committed to both preserving and interpreting Delaware's difficult history. The following is information about each of the persons represented in the videos. 3:02 p.m. m Wednesday Dina, Dec 2, 2015 Dina is an experienced spinner who has been robbed for more than 26 years. She was held captive mainly by various men in the Dickinson family. Released along with her children in John Dickinson's 1786 manuscript, Dina eventually married Peter Patton, a free black tenant of John Dickinson. Dina's last record dates back to 1810 James Summers Thursday, Dec 3.m. He married enslavement, which means his children were enslaved at birth. In 1797, he signed a contract with the family that kept his children in slavery and was able to sign the maneuvering document, which placed them for free at Deed's office at the State House (now the Old State House) in Dover, Delaware. Richard Richard Allen Friday, 4 .m Dec. When he was 8 years old, he and his family were sold to Stokely Sturgis in Dover, Delaware. Sturgis allowed Allen to attend religious meetings and later buy his freedom. Allen joined the Methodist Church preached in Delaware and neighboring states. He was the founder and first bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, which was established in Philadelphia .m in 1816. He's a fifth-term legislator. He has written to congressmen, governors and presidents. His personal beliefs about the misdemeanors of slavery led him to a crusade from North Carolina to New England to end the practice. He believed that this was america's bland and that the nation would pay for the sin of slavery if it was not abolished. Funeral #9, Nameless Black Man, Avery's Rest Sunday,

Dec 6.m. In 2014, archaeologists working at avery's resting place west of Rehoboth Beach, Delaware dug up 11 human burials. Scientific and DNA analysis found that three of the individuals were of African descent. Historical context suggests that these are the blacks enslaved by John Avery. One funeral, from 1674 to 1714, was of an unnamed black man who was between 32 and 42 years old at the time of death. The division is committed to restoring the dignity of these individuals and making them their place in Delaware's history. The Department of Historical and Cultural Affairs is an agency of the state of Delaware. The division improves The Country's quality of life while preserving the state's unique historical heritage, promoting community stability and economic viability, and providing educational programs and assistance to the general public in Delaware's history. The department's diverse range of services includes the work of five museums accredited by the American Alliance of Museums, administration of the State Office for The Preservation of Historical Heritage, preservation of the archaeological and historical sites of the state, operation of a conference center and management of historical sites throughout the state. Basic funding of departments of programs and services is provided by annual loans from the Delaware General Assembly and grants from the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, federal agency. However, the content and opinions expressed in the department's programs and services do not necessarily reflect the views and policies of the Department of the Interior.
