Saudi Arabia's decision to temporarily ban its citizens and foreign residents from umrah has raised fears among Muslims that the weather ban will be longer than initially thought and may affect the annual hajj last week, Saudi Arabia suspended umrah flights to the cities of Mecca and Medina due to the Corona virus and as part of a series of measures to prevent the spread of the potentially deadly disease that has affected dozens of countries around the world. The Kingdom stated that the suspension of umrah was temporary and subject to regular review. However, Muslims are increasingly apprehensive about the possibility of doing umrah any time soon, a cherished dream for many. One of them is Sabri Abdel Rahman, an Egyptian escort in Cairo. The 46-year-old said enthusiastically: My dream in life is to go and yesterday the wall of the Kaaba [the holiest Islamic site]. By the grace of God, I saved the necessary money and planned to perform umrah in Ramadan. The holy month of Ramadan, which is scheduled to begin in late April this year, is usually the peak of umrah. But given the rapid spread of the coronavirus, it seems that my dream should be delayed for some time, which I hope will not be long, Abdel Rahman told the Daily News. Millions of Muslims flock to Saudi Arabia's holy sites to perform umrah in the months leading up to the annual pilgrimage, scheduled to begin in late July this year. Muslims, who cannot afford the high costs of hajj, often perform umrah, during which they follow in the footsteps of the Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) and gather in rituals around the Kaaba. Hajj is one of the five pillars of Islam. Muslims are expected to carry it out at least once in their lives if they are able to afford it and are physically capable. The temporary ban on Umrah visas could eventually force millions of Muslims around the world to postpone or cancel a journey that many have eagerly waited for for years. The outbreak is likely to affect the much larger annual pilgrimage. Muslims around the world share the suffering of the loss of hajj. For years, some have been on the waiting lists for participating in the Hajj. Some Egyptian lawmakers have called for the cancellation of this year's annual hajj season, citing fears of an epidemic of the coronavirus. Mp Mohammed Abu Hamed said official religious institutions should go out and demand that Egyptians travel to hajj this year be postponed until further notice to prevent the transmission of infections that have spread in several Arab countries and in view of the suspension of Saudi Arabia umrah. The legislator argued that Islam exhorts the prevention of harm and the preservation of human life. consent, said Deputy Maysa Atsa if he Continued its spread, it would be advisable to put the pilgrim on hold this year. She told Egypt's Al-Youm Al-Saba newspaper that the decision is to protect Egyptians and prevent the virus from infiltrating the country. Egyptian MP Shukri al-Jundi sees the situation differently. The soldier said there is no need to postpone the trip to hajj, which will take place this year in July when it is so hot that the virus will not survive. Such calls [to cancel the hajj] can cause panic among citizens. Therefore, there should be no such premature talk. Egypt has reported two confirmed cases of CORONA virus so far and has denied allegations of outbreaks in the country of 100 million people. Many travel agencies in Muslim countries deal exclusively with pilgrims and are likely to be hit hard. If there is a scenario in which we can see the cancellation of the five-day pilgrimage, which attracts more than two million people annually, it could be even more disastrous. According to official figures, 500,000 Egyptians are running umrah throughout the year. Some 1,000 Egyptians who were travelling to re-enter The City of Cairo returned from Cairo airport shortly after the Saudi ban was announced. Many passengers were stunned. Faten Sobhi, a 56-year-old Egyptian woman, remembers the biggest shock of my life. Like most of my comrades, I burst into tears when we were told that umrah trips had stopped until further notice. I paid 20,000 pounds [AED 4,761] to a travel agency as the cost of the entire trip. Whenever I look at the situation with them, they keep telling them: God knows. I don't care about the money even though it's part of the end-of-service bonus as a hospital accountant. What I look forward to is doing umrah. Muslims in other countries are similarly disappointed. Ashmad Warzito, an Indonesian who was among many passengers who landed at Soekarno-Hatta International Airport in Jakarta in response to the Saudi ban, said: No word can describe how I feel today. We are very sad and frustrated, he told The Associated Press. For the 2 million Palestinians in Gaza, the Saudi decision closes one of the last avenues to leave the narrow coastal strip, which has been controlled by Hamas and besieged by the Israeli regime since 2007. The pilgrimage from Umrah from Gaza begins at about $1,300, a huge sum in an area with a 50 per cent unemployment rate. Some Gazans sell jewellery or property to pay for them. We are imprisoned in Gaza, and for us, visiting Mecca and Medina seems like a prisoner who receives a visit from his family, said Ibrahim al-Tank, who had hoped to leave with his two sisters on March 8. There, we release all oppression within us. The Saudi action has led to chaos in the business of many travel agencies. Saudi decision The umrah season, which peaks in Rajab, Shaaban and Ramadan, has hit hard, said Hossam Khalaf, a tour operator at a travel company in central Cairo. Certainly, all tourism companies organizing umrah and hajj trips will suffer heavy losses. There are already visas and airline tickets issued. Hotel reservations are also available in Mecca and Medina. What's going to happen to them? I don't know. I hope the ban does not last until Ramadan. An estimated 100,000 Egyptians usually travel to perform umrah in Ramadan. But Ihab Abdel-Al, a member of the Association of Egyptian Travel Agents, seems optimistic. I don't expect the decision to suspend umrah flights for more than two weeks and will not extend into the hajj season, he told the Egyptian daily Al-Watan. Abdel-Al defended the Saudi ban. This decision is in the interest of umrah and their countries of origin to protect them from HIV infection and spread, he said. The suspension of umrah flights also provides time for quarantine at airports and other ports. We have to cooperate with Saudi Arabia to protect pilgrims. It is too early to determine the economic losses caused by the embargo. An Egyptian tourism official, speaking on condition of anonymity, ruled out the economic losses of pilgrims whose trips and organizers are being held. The rights of umrah veterans are reserved. When flights resume, everything will return to normal without any additional burden. The suspension is a temporary measure as Saudi Arabia works hard to keep things under control. The viral diseases have claimed hundreds of thousands of infections worldwide since December when it broke out in China, where the virus originated. The ban will impose significant costs of its own, in the form of hotels and empty companies in Mecca and Medina.
