The receivers within your vehicle's security system and remote control transmitters are designed together to provide an average range of 50 feet during optimal conditions, although sometimes you may experience more range, but sometimes at a smaller range than usual. Atmospheric conditions or interference from other RF-emitting devices can effectively reduce the transmitter range. The emergency disarmament procedure, if your remote transmitter is not working, the system can disarm using the alarm code on the front of this guide. Follow the steps below: Enter your vehicle. The alarm will ring when the door is open. Put the key into the ignition and turn it to the open position. Do not start the vehicle. View the first number in the code, allow the status indicator to flash the number of times it is the first number in the code. After the indicator light flashes the corresponding number of times, turn off the vehicle ignition. The first number has been entered. Turn the ignition back to the open position, the status indicator will start flashing again. Repeat this process in steps 3 and 4, this time using the second number in the code. After entering the fourth number correctly, the alarm will disarm. Note: If you enter an incorrect number, turn off the ignition of the vehicle, then turn it on. When the indicator light starts flashing, enter the new code from the beginning 27.12.2001 27.12.2001.
