So, without further a further notice, we present the top 100 accompanied by our favorite goodreads entries. 100. Gut Symmetries, Jeanette Winterson (1998) Gut Symmetries is all about love. And physics. And geometry. And the infinite and the finite, and the material, and what matters, and the particles and the horrors and the life and the time and death and the grinning skull in the mirror. - Sam, Goodreads 99. All that matters, Susan X. Meagher (2007) I loved this book, from start to finish! The conversations between Kylie and Blair cover forever the importance of human life and relationships! -Ulta, Goodreads 98. Map of Ireland, Stephanie Grant (2009) Painful, purely The story of a 16-year-old Irish-American guy from Southie... He smacks of unpleasant deeply inculturated racism as it seeps into his home life and his attempts to understand and realize his own unspooling sexuality. Mary, Goodreads 97. Say Please: Lesbian BDSM Erotica, by Sinclair Sexsmith (2012) [read the post on tell me please here] This is a great collection of erotic, hands on one of the best collections I've read. Sinclair Sexsmith has curated a wonderful collection of stories that are sure to titillate and make a good girl blush. - Erin, Goodreads 96. Away from Xanadu, Julie Anne Peters (2005) Peters addresses not only the issues of being a gay teenager in this book, but also the emotional turmoil feeling abandoned. Jill, Goodreads 95. Happy Accidents. By Jane Lynch (2011) It's a breezy read that doesn't take up much of your time, but it surprises me with honesty. Sean Kennedy, Goodreads 94. Stay, Nicola Griffith (2003) STAY less of a mystery or a thriller than a grief-and-recovery story — but I absolutely don't mean to warn you: There is a good amount of mystery and action. But what's going on is Aud's personal development is central and the action is happening at the edges as it were. Rachel Neumeier, Goodreads 93. Drag King Dreams, Leslie Feinberg (2006) This book is so inspiring and heartbreaking. The story lines are complex, but easy to follow. Kit, Goodreads 92. Art & Lies, Jeanette Winterson (1996) In Art and Lies, Jeanette Winterson cruises against a predictable and unimagical reality that denies there's more than meets the eye. -Twiggy, Goodreads 91. Babyji, by Abha Dawesar (2005) This is a very honest and true account of the 16-year-old mind, but it goes beyond that complexity of self discovery amid the search for meaning in a world of inequalities. -Mandi, Goodreads 90. Seriously... I'm Kidding, Ellen DeGeneres (2012) Ellen's book was the perfect balance between advice and jokes. It is an extremely light and easy to read. - Kristyn, Goodreads 89. Y: The Last Man, Vol. 1: Unmanned, Brian K. Vaughan (2003) This book was interesting and complicated. The multi-point perspective was never confusing and worked very well to add tension to the plot. - Stella FAYZ Chen, Goodreads 88. Southland Auto Acres, Lisa Jones (2010) A fun, airy read. A nice, tight story that moves. It's more like a coming out book. The background of the car lot is well drawn. Brook St., 87 Goodreads. The pyramid waltz, Barbara Ann Wright (2012) I can only say that this book was incredible. The characters were complex and well written. The dialogue was fantastic and often humorous. Each character has brought something new into the book and is very different. — Lavoie, Goodreads 86. The Slow Fix, by Ivan E. Coyote (2009) These autobiographical short stories are phenomenal. Most are less than 5 pages long, many have a perception of the sexes, but it's all about finding a place in the world. In the end, these wrinkles are the community, the weave of the fabric, and I am very impressed by the depth and feeling that Coyote conveys in such a small space. Emily, Goodreads 85. The Complete Strangers in Paradise, Volume 1, Terry Moore (1998) Very well written, wonderfully illustrated and tons of heart. - Autumm Eden 84. Near Spider Man, ivan E. Coyote (2000) A very heartfelt bunch of stories growing up knowing it just doesn't fit. Excellent read oddballs everywhere. Vanessa, Goodreads 83. Full of Hothead Paisan, Diane DiMassa (1999) It's wonderfully cathartic at times, deeply meaningful to others, and maintains a very dark gallows humor. Yes, Hothead doesn't relentlessly hate men and het women, but you'd be missing the point of rejecting that. Ellie, Goodreads 82. Rage: In Love Story, Julie Anne Peters (2009) I thought that the dichotomy between the protagonist's fantasy life and reality was very well portrayed, and Ms. Peters did an excellent job depicting an abusive (high school, lesbian) relationship. Liz, Goodreads 81. Love Story Starring My Dead Best Friend, Emily Horner (2010) Horner's first novel is well portrayed and well done. It wasn't just a few loud moments of laughter and I really liked the narrator. He was sorely believable and so adolescent that he immediately got off the side. — Melody, Goodreads Goodreads
