Those comfortable spring and summer comfortable, breathable slippers can be a paradise, their ease of wear - just slip 'em on and go with jeans or shorts or mini - making them go for the main weather warmth. However, they are not the only option for open shoes. Here are five stylish alternatives to flip flops when you're looking for something higher fashion able to dress or just a bit more interesting. You'll find espadrilles in a variety of styles and textures, from printed canvas to perfectly neutral leather that works well in maxi dress dresses. They can increase height as well, which is useful for long dresses and wide-legged pants. While espadrilles can be flat, they also often come in platforms and wedge styles that read casual and high fashion (and high!). At the same time, the ad pairs it with a pleated chiffon dress and wraps the print head for a summery look that blows the wind from the head into a ton. Next, like a vacation in Mexico. These shoes have long originated in Mexico as lightweight flat sandals with woven leather, and they have entered the modern shoe scene in remarkably similar ways. It's a rustic look known for its comfort, ranging from woven leather wrapped back around the heels to help stabilize your feet (and keep the back of your tongue-in-cheek trousers from crawling under your feet). Shoes in this Mexican village can be sexy as well, since it's more modern, using a classic huarache, putting a woven top on a wedge platform or high heels, making it a versatile and stylish spring/summer option, advertising for a laid-back look, not even trying to wear them with a lightweight cotton midi and a sharp peasant top. Next, when it's about naked Huaraches, espadrilles and sandals can be fun, casual and cool on summer feet - but elegant? For slippers that can fill that bill, take a look at a pair of T-straps. Of course, they can be casual, but this style can also be distilled with single women's straps across the foot, and the other runs up to the back foot, creating the illusion of longer legs. The top of the T-line can be satin, leather, beaded, knitted or chained for a start, and you'll find shiny toppings of any shoe, from stiletto to flat. That can work for a casual Friday as easily as a day at a mall. Next, the current style is fully with a twist. A few years ago, flats had all been angry: a laid-back feeling paired with the ability, you know, walking has made them a real favorite, but an alternative for flip flops? yes, well, if you take the out, The open-air flats provide breathable and summer feel that pair perfectly with skinnies, shorts and more elaborate skirts, while offering a glimpse of your pretty painted shoes (which could be teal this year, and if so, keep showing off). Finally, the ad looks relatively new that you might want to try. Conveniently check up the modern check can add some finger to your height, the look of your legs and work with pretty much any outfits? They are form flats - a cross between platforms and flats - and they are not for everyone. Young and trendy slippers, they have something of a feeling. The 70s, which may not have actually attracted people through the '70s, even though they were a notable choice for sandals, not only for flattering lifts, but also because they were about a single shoe that still walked at all, regardless of the height of the heel. The 4-inch heels are paired with a 4-inch platform equal to flat and tall, which can be useful if you're tired of spending extra money to reduce your jeans. Platform ad sandals can offer any top styles we've talked about here, making them a versatile shoe that's easy to work on in your current wardrobe. Try it with a denim mini, sequined top and a simple leather headband for a boho part look, a glam part and a real head shift. The options that don't flip the flop are plentiful and rewarding as you set your favorite gold (they've been called!) and try something new - if only for the occasional thrill. There's nothing like simple and casual slippers, and while you can't leave your flat form or T line by the door for a work mailbox, they are a great way to turn it up. A pair of interesting slippers can be a piece that updates your look. For more information on spring/summer style and great shoes, check out the links on the next page.
