Trips and Dockings: A History of the Pirate Bay (also shortened and known as TPB) It was launched on September 15, 2003. Gotfrid Svartholm, Fredrik Neij, and Peter Sunde are credited as co-founders. They are known by themselves 'anakata', 'TiAMO', and 'brokep', respectively. All three are members of Piratbyrån (translated as The Piracy Office), a pro-Swedish culture think-in and anti-copyright organisation. At this time, the BitTorrent protocol was still in its early stages as a file-sharing technology. To promote free information sharing, the team started their own file sharing website. Savarolm and Nige first run the service, and Sond served as a spokesperson. TPB originally went online in Mexico before relocating to Sweden. However, it started out as a single Swedish language site. Its initial operations also had no real structure. The torrent site was separated from Piratbyrån in October 2004. It added support for more languages soon after. From hosting at 256 MB of RAM, the Pirate Bay then grows its limited server capacity. It indexed 60,0 0 torrent files by the end of 2004. The site also attracted 2.5 million users and traffic volumes were high all the time until the following year. Around this time, the TPB paid serious attention to the authorities. Copyright holders sent notices to the site to destroy certain content that violates intellectual property laws. However, these demands fell on deaf ears. Swedish police attacked and shut down the company's servers in Stockholm on May 31, 2006. The site came online after just three days of decline. As a result, the Pirate Bay was further driven into the mainstream. It attracted even more users and reached more than 10 million aged. The most resistant bitorrent site of the Galaxy TPB is well known for visualizing the top line. It still survives today despite numerous attempts to put it. The founders, along with primary wealthy Carl Lundstrom, were found guilty of aiding copyright infringement on April 17, 2009. After the appeal, their prison sentences were reduced, but their fines increased. The ordeal encouraged operators to make several technical changes to avoid future law enforcement issues. The website stopped offering torrent files for larger torrents in 2012. Instead it changed to magnet ties. (You can think of magnet links as better versions of torrent files. TPB also announced its shift to cloud-based storage in the same year. The second attack happened on December 9, 2014. Swedish authorities once again seized computers and servers. However, all the data had already been backed up in the cloud. Successful years saw various attempts to seize scope by law courts. TPB returned to its main .org domain in May 2016. Despite numerous downtimes, the site thepiratebay.org URL (2016) still lives on.
