Crash bandicoot gems guide

Bandicoot Crash: Run! Clear, red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, black and N. Rotary gems (known as power gems in Bandicoot Crash: On run! and diamonds in Japanese localization) are stones that can be collected throughout the Bandikot crash series. Like crystals, they are powerful artifacts capable of harnessing planetary energy when collected (as Mentioned by N. Brio in Crash Bandicoot 2: Cortex Strikes Back). They are usually collected through different means and special tasks such as breaking all the boxes at a certain level. Gemstones are also shown in different colors and are more distinctive and rare than ordinary gemstones. In Twinsanity Crash, there are six gems hidden in each level to crash to collect, which count towards 100% finish. Overview shows gems in every major crash Bandicoot console game so far. They are usually collected in each level that contains a crystal. Gems are different from crystals though. Crash is forced to collect crystals in each level in order to progress in the game and plot, but gems are more optional for him to collect. However, they are still required to collect if the player wants to reach 100% of the achievement. According to N. Brio, gems, like crystals, are powerful artifacts capable of harnessing planetary energy and can be used for power machines. Also like crystals, gemstones possess huge amounts of energy on their own. Gems are clear the most common way to collect gems by breaking all the boxes at a certain level. This requires crash out and search every way and complete each bonus round to ensure that it earns a gem at the end of each level (except in the Bandicoot crash where boxes in bonus rounds do not count towards boxes in the level). There are also different methods for collecting regular gems such as completing the path of death, a specific task, or a secret level. Grey gems that appear only in Bandicoot Crash: Fury Veneer, this function like clear gems but can only be obtained by completing jewel ways, discovering and targeting. This share the same model as red gems. Colored colored gems are similar to regular gems, but work differently and are rarer. There is only one of every color gem in most crash bandicoot games. Colored gem types include blue, red, green, purple, yellow and orange, although not all colors appear in all games. Colorful gems are usually given to crash to complete a particular challenge, task, or puzzle in a level. Most often this is a road of death, but it can also be of discovering a secret area of level or completing a special mission. Once the jewel is obtained colored, it is counted towards the total regular jewel. The difference between colored and clear gems is that colored gems provide a special lift at certain levels once you get them. These special jewel lifts allow crash to reach Areas in the level in order to break more boxes he can not break earlier or take him to a completely different way to collect more visible gems. These jewel lifts only work once the color gem has been collected though. Otherwise, the elevator scheme will only appear if the jewel is not collected yet. In Bandicoot Crash: Fury Veneer, at any level that contains a colorful gem, the secret path will become so set out if the player has died anywhere but special areas. The following is a list of each type of gems and where they can be found in various games.
