

Clash of legends davenport ia

By John Unland Monte Cox presented an outdoor kickboxing/pro boxing show at the Mississippi Valley Fairgrounds in Davenport, Iowa, billed as 'The Clash of Legends.' There were a total of 11 fights, of which 8 were professional boxing and a main event with Pat Miletich and Michael Nunn in a kickboxing match! The evening opened with an easy match between Roberto Negrete and Daniel Buenaventura. This was an entertaining four rounds that both fighters were aggressive and willing to exchange. Negrete was looking to land power shots and threw a lot of wild ones off hooks, but he probably landed keep Buenaventura at a distance and pick up most of the rounds. Buenaventura was able to counteract effectively to the body and showed a fine left uppercut, but in the end he came up short and 40-36. Negrete continues to impress and is now 3-0, while Buenaventura loses his debut and returns to Chicago 0-1. Next up were super lightweight Anthony Crowder of Des Moines, and debuting Mitchell Leconte of Cedar Rapids. This one was all Leconte when he dropped Crowder twice in the second to score stoppage. Leconte was a solid amateur and is now off to a good start in the pro ranks. Heavyweights Ryan Antle of Davenport and Terrence Walker of Minneapolis both made their debuts in the next fight of the evening. At 6'3 Walker, and that was the difference. The first round saw Antle press the action and he had Walker backing up, but he was unable to sustain any kind of offence or do any real damage. Walker got into a bit of a groove in the second and began to land big right hands that had Antle stuck in the corners and along the ropes for most of the round. Walker only came forward and threw straight rights that got Antle to back up, but for some reason he was hesitant to throw combinations. Antle's face was quite broken, and the fight was stopped after the second round due to cuts. Antle starts his career 0-1, while Walker gets a 1-0 start. Walker was extremely raw but showed some decent power in his right hand. If he is willing to put the work in, he may be worth keeping an eye on. Two local MMA fighters debuted in tonight's fourth fight. A four-round middleweight bout between former UFC fighter Junior Hernandez and Jeremy Castro turned into a highly competitive affair. Both boxers were aggressive and none of them were willing to give the other satisfaction of backing up. There were many blows thrown and landed by both men, but in end Hernandez made the decision with scores of 39-37 twice and 40-36. He pushed the action a little more and landed more punches to pick up the victory. A couple of local super-middleweights were next with Pachino Hill of Davenport taking on Will Omer of East Moline, Illinois. Hill had the audience on his side from the beginning, when he was a popular amateur, and he showed why from the beginning, when he was a popular amateur, and he showed why from the opening bell. Hill began throwing relentless combinations to the head and body of Omer, who was willing to change shots first, but it was evident early on that he was over matched. Omer quickly began to back up and held on for the rest of the match. It didn't last much longer though as Hill put him down at 2:01 of the second KO, and Omer (0-1) drops his debut. Former UFC fighter Jeremy Horn, now fighting out of Salt Lake City made his boxing debut against Marty Lindquist of Blaine, Minnesota. Lindquist could land. Horn would counter then back out of trouble and Lindquist could never really find a rhythm or keep any kind of pressure on Horn. The blows began to accumulate and Horn finished the game in the third to start his career 1-0. With the loss, Lindquist sees his record fall to 14-11. Donovan Dennis was a little awkward, and he stayed well out of reach in the first round. He jumped in and threw a punch and jumped out again before Dennis could counter. He showed some respectable power, so Dennis couldn't just come rushing in without getting caught. Dennis started to get the timing down in the second round and was able to get close and land some power shots of his own, but Williams hung tough and fought back well. He was able to prop Dennis up a couple of times and had him staggering back at least twice, but there was no upset in the cards for Williams tonight. Dennis and he picked up the stoppage about halfway through when Williams went down and couldn't beat the count. It was good to see Dennis come back in the victory column, especially in front of his hometown fans. He is now 13-4 with 11 KOs, while Williams goes to 5-10-1. The co-main event saw two guys who don't like each other go on it for four rounds and the fans loved it. Stephen Edwards and Fred Thomas, both from Davenport, have been going back and forth for years, so this fight has been making for a while. Edwards is probably the most polarizing boxer in quad cities, you either love him or you hate him, and there aren't many people in the middle. Thomas, on the other hand, is a highly regarded and respected boxing coach in the area, so that leaned a little. Thomas started well and kept the very aggressive Edwards from pressing the action in the first round. Things began to change in the second when Edwards from coming in for most of the match and take over. Edwards from coming in for most of the round. just kept throwing punches, and Thomas couldn't get enough on his punches to slow him down, which made him no choice but to back up. Thomas looked a little tired after the second round, and Edwards just kept coming forward, backing his opponent up and Thomas wasn't really able to get any of. In the final round Thomas mustered up some offense, but it was too little, too late and Edwards picked up a comfortable decision (40-36 twice and 39-37) to improve to 13-1-1. The main event saw two area legends face off in a four round kickboxing match. UFC Hall of Famer Pat Miletich and former champion Michael Nunn took center stage in a Fight 2 Unite, trying to give something back to their fans and the Quad Cities. Both men took this seriously, and it was fun for what it was, They both showed why at one point they were considered the best in their respective sports, and it was not even their respective sports, and it was not be sport they were considered the best in their respective sports. the footwork that made him motionless when he was in his prime. Miletich buckled Nunn a couple of times with a leg kick and even dropped him in the third with a well-placed kick, but he didn't look like Nunn's punch output. It didn't look like Nunn was attempting any kicks of his own, but he still found a way to edge out the always cruel Miletich by split decision. UFC Hall of Famer Pat Miletich returned to action in his birthplace of Davenport, lowa on Saturday night, but ended up at the wrong end of a split decision verdict against 57-year-old Nunn, but it was the former two-division world champion in boxing who held the upper hand in his kickboxing bout at the Mississippi Valley Fairgrounds. The judges scored their four-round bout 37-39, 39-37, 40-36 in favor of former IBF middleweight champion Nunn, whose last professional boxing fight was 18 years ago, back in January 2002. Miletich admitted after the game, I looked like a catcher's mine, while Nunn, who served 199 months of a 292-month prison sentence between 2002 and 2019, said he was a little disappointed that the fight didn't continue for a few more rounds. got me with a couple of straight hooks, he said. I knew I had two more rounds in me, but they said it was over. The fight was watched in front of an estimated crowd of about 3,500 spectators, including former UFC champions Tim Sylvia and Matt Hughes, while Michael Nunn's brother-in-law, legendary former San Francisco 49ers running back Roger Craig, was also reportedly present, wearing a disguise. Also in action on the card was 44-year-old former UFC, Bellator and PRIDE fighter Jeremy Horn, who claimed a thirdround TKO victory over 50-year-old Minnesota cruiserweight Marty Lindquist. More than 3,000 people turned up in a parking lot outside the Mississippi Valley Fairgrounds in Davenport, Iowa, on Saturday (July 18, 2020) to watch the Pat Miletich kickbox former two-time boxing champion Michael Nunn in what is being reported as the third fight sporting event in the United States to be held in front of an audience since coronavirus pandemic shut down the world as we know it. Old school mixed martial arts (MMA) fans are going to recognize many names in this story about the Clash of Legends event. The show was organized by Monte Cox. Jeremy Horn competed on the undercard boxing of a 50-year-old opponent. Former champions Tim Sylvia and Matt Hughes were on hand to watch. The whole thing was a strange mish-mash of Quad City fighters of all stripes boxing in special fourround fights, made all strangers of COVID restrictions. While photos of the event showed few or no attendees wearing masks, the event seemed to follow some guidelines. Seats were grouped into groups of 10 that were distributed six feet apart. With an estimated 3,500 people showing up, some fans found themselves ridiculously far away from the action. But it still strikes that sitting at home is bored during lockdown. As for Pat Miletich's fight? He ended up losing a split decision (39-37, 40-36, 37-39) to the 57-year-old Nunn on the scorecards. The only referee who scored the match for Pat was apparently quite generous. I looked like a catcher's mine, Miletich declared ruefully after the game. Quad City Times has a fairly detailed overview of the show, including lots of photos from the event. Veteran commentator Ron Kruck was also present, sharing those moments on social media: Here's !!! pic.twitter.com/R3IB7QYr8q: Ron Kruck (@rkruck) July 19, 2020 Here are the full results of the event: Roberto Negrete, West Liberty, 4-round decision over Daniel Buenaventura, Chicago Mitchell Leconte, Cedar Rapids, second-round TKO over Tony Crowder, Des Moines Devoniere Jackson, Cedar Rapids, 4-round over Rvan Rutherford (kick boksing) Terrance Walker, Minneapolis, 2-runde TKO over Will Omar, East Moline, 4-runde avgiørelse over Sean Huffman, Knoxville, Tenn, (kick boksing) Jeremy Horn, Sandy, Utah, 3rd-runde TKO over Marty Lindquist, Blaine, Minn.
