You're talking to a military romance scammer. I received an email from the U.S. Army that directly answers your question, which is pasted below please keep reading. I think you are a victim of a military romance scam, and the person you are talking to is a foreign national who raises an American soldier who claims to be stationed abroad in a peacekeeping mission. This is the key to the scam they always claim to be a peacekeeping mission. Part of their scammers say they don't have access to their money, so their mission is very dangerous. If your girlfriend's girlfriend/future husband/wife asks you to do these things or exhibit this behavior, it's probably a scam.Moves to a private messaging site immediately after meeting you on Facebook or SnapChat or Instagram or on some dating or social media sites. Often they delete a site with which they met them immediately after they asked you to go to a more private messaging siteProfesses love you very quickly and seem to quote poems and lyrics along with using your kind of broken language as they profess their love and dedication quickly. They also showed concern for their health and love for their family. Promises marriage as soon as he/she gets a state holiday that they have asked you to pay. They ask for money (errands) and Amazon, iTunes, Verizon, etc. gift cards, medicine, religious practices, and leave to return home, internet access, complete work tasks, help a sick friend, get him out of trouble, or anything that sounds fishy. The army provides all the needs of the soldier, including food medical care and transportation for holidays. Believe me, I've survived this, you're probably being cheated. I'm just trying to show you examples that you are most likely being connned. Below is the email response I received after I sent a request to the U.S. government when discovered I was a scammer. I got this amazing response back with lots of useful links on how to find and report on your And how to learn more about Romance Scams.Now you can also copy the photo he gave you and do a Google image search and you hopefully see the pictures of the real person he pretends to be. it doesn't always work and dig a little. If you find a real person, you can directly message them and warn them that their image is being used by scammers. Good luck to you, and I'm sorry, this can happen to you. please continue reading the government response I received below this very informative. You have contacted an email that is being monitored by the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command. Unfortunately, this is a general concern. We assure you that there is never any reason to send money to anyone claiming that you are a soldier online. If you only spoke to this person online, it is likely that they are not a US soldier at all. If this is a suspected impersonated social media profile, we encourage you to report it to the platform as soon as possible. Sanjaana's education and school district departments must always make decisions about what to include in their curriculum. There are many life skills that people have that are not taught at school. The question is, should those skills be taught in schools? I teach in high school, so I'll talk about it. A typical secondary school curriculum should provide students with a wide range of education, which prepares them to be citizens of democracy and be able to think critically. For democracy to work, we need educated, discerning citizens who can make good decisions based on evidence and objective thought. In theory, people who are well informed about history, culture, science, mathematics, etc., who are able to think critically, impartially, will have the tools to participate in democracy and make good decisions for themselves and society as a whole. They should also learn to be learners on how to carry out effective, basic research and collaborate with other people. If this happens, understanding how to perform procedural tasks in real life should not be many challenges. We can't possibly teach all the necessary life skills people need, but we can help students become better aware of how to acquire the skills they need. Should we teach them to change the tire when they can easily consult a book or search the internet to find step-by-step instructions? If we teach them how to balance a cheque book or teach them how to think mathematically and make sense of problems, the simple task of balancing a cheque book (which requires simple arithmetic and the ability to enter numbers and words in columns and rows in obvious ways) is easy to figure them out. If we teach them to be good at critical thinking and have some problem solving skills, they will be able to apply those overarching skills to all kinds of every day tasks that shouldn't be difficult for someone with a decent cognitive ability to figure out. It is analogous to ask why a culinary school did not teach its pupils the steps and ingredients according to a specific recipe. The school taught them more general cooking and food science skills so that they could figure out how to make many specific recipes without major problems. They can also create their own recipes. So whether we want citizens with very specific skill sets that they need to get through everyday life, or do we want citizens with critical thinking, problem solving and others cognitive skills that will allow them to easily acquire any simple, procedural skills they can come to need at any point in their lives? Just check out the cbse website... CBSEit will come in late August... don't worry if it doesn't come.. because it may be late it may be in mid-September as well... just carefully check the CBSE website... Procedure... just fill out the form online and select the subjects where you want to take the exam again... and read the rules carefully... after that your payment I think for every thing it will cost 200 ruppesand then they will send u letter to your exam .. or tell your muscle. then just collect your recognize card from the school written in a letter that's all.... If any ques..comment down below... Do not hesitate... Yes, you really should be in shape as you need to have your background confirmation yet HR would post and call every time unless you fill it in. Many years ago, I worked for a document management company. There is cool software that can automate aspects of handwritten forms. We had an airport as a customer - they crawled a lot and (as I said earlier) it was a few years ago ... Your airport customs forms, boxes that you need to write – basically an invisible scanner – but are used because then we people will tend to write more orderly and clearer, which allows you to sit easier to recognize with the computer. All characters with a accuracy less than X%, based on the recognition engine, are marked and displayed as an image closer to a specific character so that the human operator can say it is A. This way you can quickly navigate through most forms and output say - SQL database, with reference to the original image of the form you filled out. If you see black cells in three corners of the document, it is likely that they will be set for scanning (they help identify and redirect the page digitally). If the document contains a unique barcode, which I would like to change, there is an even greater chance that it will be scanned - the document is important enough to print it separately, which costs more, which means that it will most likely be used on the locking side. (I've noticed that in the past in the Bahamas and some other Caribbean islands they use these kinds of collection mechanisms, but they have far fewer people arriving than the U.S. does every day) The real answer is: it depends. Depending on each country and its policies and procedures. Usually I would be surprised if they scanned and kept on paper. In the US, they potentially submit those for a while, then destroy them, possibly mining them with some data about travelers. After all, I suspect that the probability of paper and data collection in customs forms fluctuates Spectrum like this: Third World Customs Guy has a paper to show that he's done his job, the paper gets thrown away at the end of the shift. -----&gt; We keep all documents! Documents! is scanned as you pass customs and unique barcodes to determine which flight /gate/area form has been served, so we coordinate with the cameras at the airport and captured your image. We also know exactly how much vodka you brought into the country. : )
