In South Orange County, CA, a baseball program by Sergio Santistevan by Alle Ansehen will tell anyone who walks through his door about his philosophy. Led by a group of high-level coaches, saddlebacks are made up of Cowboys discipline, respect and development – everything else comes second. We’re really looking forward to the fundamentals and development, not necessarily about winning, Saddleback Cowboys coach Wade Jackson said. Teaching them the right aspects of the game... Having fundamentals, development, sports respect and professionalism on the field. Growing up in the local area, Jackson has decades of sports and coaching experience. Jackson had a two-time All-South Coast League selection at El Toro High School. After your high school Jackson went on to play at Saddleback College, a Juco in Mission Viejo, CA. Jackson garnered many accolades during his junior college run as he was twice in the All-Orange Empire League selection, the 1994 Junior College Player of the Year Southern Division, and he broke marks in batting, hits, RBI and runs. Today, Jackson saddleback is enshrined in the College Baseball Hall of Fame. After his jusco run, Jackson played at the University of Nevada-Reno and was selected by the Anaheim Angels in the 1996 MLB draft. Once he was done playing in the minors, Jackson's career coaching stopped for youth baseball. A year after his retirement, Jackson's neighbor approached him and asked him to coach his son's travel team, one of the only baseball teams in South Orange County at the time. Through the last 19 years in youth baseball, Jackson is a co-chris Malec and Richard Mercado. With Jackson having the owner of saddleback Cowboys having experience coaching his son took a few years off coaching when his son, Jake, was younger but returned when he turned age 8 so he could coach the team. When Jake was ready to go to college, he followed his father's legacy and chose Nevada where he was named a Collegiate Baseball Freshman All-American in 2018. Jackson's co-owned saddlebacks have a lot of experience on the diamonds of the Cowboys, Malec and Mercado, too. Malec was a freshman All-American at the University of California and three-time All-Big West selection — Santa Barbara. He then got drafted by the New York Yankees in 2005, where he was a 2008 Class AA All-Star and three-time league champion who was ad.n.a. Mercado reached the University of Arizona where he was a captain for the 2004 College World Series team. He was selected in the 12th round of the MLB draft by the Arizona Diamondbacks and achieved a nine-year professional career, also focused his post after reaching Triple A Jackson, Malec and Mercado coaching young playing careers on baseball, but all three guys have families — it can be hard to juggle baseball and their lives. It's balance, long, Jackson laughed. We usually get on the field on another two in the afternoon and we're up to nine on it. Weekends are on the baseball field. It's hard. Despite the long run, the three coaches find a way to balance their lives and still implement discipline, respect and development in their players. We teach them that this is a tough game, a family game, something you have to work on every day. It's not something you just show up and throw your cleats and start throwing baseball, Jackson said. You have to respect it, treat it the way it should be treated, and give it your all. This game can be very lucky for you, take you too far, and do a lot of things for you. Saddleback Cowboys coaching staff have set goals Years for each age group but winning is not at the top of that list. Development always comes first. As they get older that stuff happens because of what they do as they grow.. | We are really keen on developing boys, especially at a young age. The team's development comes with the respect and discipline that Jackson says is also taught in the youngest teams. The rule of a saddleback Cowboys is that if a player doesn't show up with his uniform belt, he doesn't get to play. Jackson understands there's more to life than baseball, which is why he wants to teach life lessons to his players at the top of baseball techniques. His favourite stories to hear from players are where they sign into a college with their help, as it shows that they fulfilled their goals of making good ballplayers and disciplined men. It's not just baseball, it's teaching them aspects of life and becoming a young man, Jackson said. Teaching them beyond baseball is another matter... Not everyone is going to let that $10 million per year and there are other things in life. After a one-and-a-half month off from baseball, the saddleback Cowboys returned to the field at the end of January. Jackson is currently hitting his team and doing some strength and conditioning as they begin to prepare for their spring schedule. It comes back to development. Most of our teams get three workouts a week, Jackson said. It's preparing for them for the fundamentals and situational (baseball).. | Putting our best foot forward and trying to teach them. Despite being away from his family, grandchildren and frequent friends due to baseball events, Jackson can't imagine himself doing anything else in life. He calls himself lucky that he has been allowed to do something that he loves for his whole life. How many people in the world can say that they actually do what they love every day? he said. I get 50 percent of the day on the baseball field and almost every day. It's something that I've developed an honor for all my life, and I get to teach it to young children now.
