It is based on the children's television series H.R. PUNCHNSTTUF. This section needs to be expanded. You can help by adding to it. (December 2011) After Jimmy (Jack Wilde) gets kicked out of the school band for tripping and breaking the drum kit, he then ventures on a journey with his newly magical talking flute Freddie. Organized by Witchiepoo (Billy Hayes), he gets on an evil boat that takes him to a live island, an island where everything is alive. Once there, he befriends Residents of the island led by Mayor H.R. Pufnstouf (voiced by Al Melvin), but the evil Witcher is determined to steal Freddie Flute Flute from him to impress visiting the Board of Witches and the Witch Boss (Martha Raye) is enough to win the Witch of the Year Award. The witch steals the flute, lurking as a cute dance instructor. Jimmy and his new friends get the flute back, having Gopher dig a tunnel into Witchiepoo Castle and fake fire. Witchiepoo retribution by bombing and destroying the city of PUNCHNSTTUF. During the bombing she is blown off by a cowboy's head that destroys her flying car. Jimmy feels bad because he endangers the inhabitants of the island and decides to leave with his flute, not telling them to keep them from further danger. Witchiepoo returns to the city of PUNCHNSTTUF and squeezes all the inhabitants to place them in the dungeon of his castle as prisoners. Jimmy finds out about it and decides to try to save them. Witchiepoo invites the Witch Council to the convention and prepares Pufnstuf to be the main meal. Jimmy disguises as a witch to join other witches. Jimmy gets recognized while trying to save Pufnstuf and is put in a dungeon with others. The mole digs into the dungeon to save them, all but Pufnstuf, which will soon be cooked. Back in town, they plan to escape. The book tells them that the only thing that scares witches is a good fairy angel. All of them dress like white good fairy angels, attack the castle, scare away the Council of Witches and save The Poufnstouf. Once they have left Witchiepoo is the only witch to find out what they were pretending to be, she flies to try to catch up and tell the other witches to return. Along the way, her minion sees the good guys in town; she orders him to use her doomsday bomb on them, but instead she made friends with everyone backstage, even inviting them to dinner. Ray's involvement in Pufnstuf led to her being cast as Benita Bizarre in Croffts' upcoming television show The Bugaloos. The album's soundtrack album was released on LP, cassette and 8-track in 1970 (Capitol /EMI Records SW-542), featuring songs and score by Charles Fox. The bootleg version of the album was interrupted by a CD in 2006 for EI Records (EI Records, ACMEM65CD). While clicking from a legitimate European company, the source of the tape is an unauthorized bootleg-noticeable for several loops added to the various tracks. Pufnstuf series wrapped, a feature film followed, which was like something of a prequel to the series and new history. This time, they actually showed Jimmy leaving the real world and arriving on a live island. Witchiepoo's plan is to steal Freddie Flute to impress his fellow witches and snag the award for Witch of the Year... but The mayor of Pufnstouf and the company are determined to thwart her plans. The million-dollar production was funded by Universal and Kellogg's Cereals, the sponsor of the show, which numerous premium cereals (which are currently highly valued). Of the few accounts I saw about the film (there's not much documentation about it), the film was delivered to production very quickly, and the set was extremely stressful compared to the show. The bulk of the cast is back, but, for reasons I'm unclear, Allan Melvin (best known as Sam Butcher on Brady Bunch) replaced Lenry Weinrb as the voice of Mayor Pufnstuf. Sid enlisted his neighbor, Cass Elliot, to take on a supporting role as frienemy witch Hazel Witchiepoo - a part that came in as the only known singer on the big screen. Elliot stole every scene and sang her favorite anthem Different (which bears an eerie resemblance to her hit Make Your Own Kind of Music). In addition to Mama Cass, Hollywood legend Martha Ray and regular Krofft live show player Billy Barty starred in the film PUFNSTUF. An outspoken supporter of the troops (who was uncool during the Vietnam War), Ray was ostracized by Hollywood, so the Crofft brothers gave her way back in. The title of this new series came directly from the film PUFNSTUF - in one scene, Witchipoo masquerades as a dancer named Betsy Bugaloo. Also remarkable, The Witch Boss (Raye) was an assistant who was a Nazi rat named Heinrich... the sidekick which she kept on Bugaloos, although it went through a minor costume change and was renamed Funky Rat.Unfortunately, the PUFNSTUF film was poorly distributed, virtually ignored and quickly forgotten. Aside from the soundtrack album (and mandatory movie posters and lobby cards), there was no tie-in for the film. For nearly a quarter of a century, the film remained locked in storage, but then at the end of '95 Nick's Nite renewed his interest in PUNCHNSTTUF, riding a marathon show by Crofft called Pufapalusa. Pufnstuf found his way back into mainstream consciousness and a year or two later the film debuted on the Disney Channel. It was finally released on VHS (??!) in 2000 without absolutely no fanfare. By this point, everyone was switching to DVDs, so it's no surprise that he wasn't a great seller (I didn't even find out about the release until long after it was out of print). In 2009, anticipating the success of the big screen Land of the Lost, Universal finally dug out the masters, gave them a new translation and tricked the film into DVDs that were plentifully available in Walmart stores. It only took 40 years for the film to get a major release, which is undoubtedly more successful because the full series was out of print and selling at ridiculous prices at the time (the show has since been Online Film DatabaseWikipediaSoundtrack Collector Collector
