Prev &lt; 1 2 3 ... 6 > Next Ficha informativa sobre os verbos ser estar (be), a partir de duas situações de comunicação. Uma officially outra not officially. Apresenta também os Pronomes Pessoais e sua equivalência em líua portuguesa. One of the most difficult things about learning Spanish is that there are two phrases equivalent to the spoken phrase, these two phrases are ser and estar. The use of these two phrases is a fairly complex thing that can be the subject of a whole diss impeachment and will still have unsolved shades left. The good news is I'll give you the answer. I'll explain to you what you need to know to have a very good understanding of how the two phrases are used. The first difference: the condition compared to nature Look at these sentences: 1. This apple is green, it has not yet fallen off the tree. 2. This apple is green and the other is red. As you can see these two sentences have different meanings even though they use the same word. The first sentence talks about the condition of the apple, it is green, it is not ripe but when time passes the apple will no longer be green but ripe. While in verse number two, the phrase is talking about an essential feature of apples, its color is green and this color will not change over time. In Spanish we use estar to express status, something that is variable or can change over time, while we use ser with essential characteristics. 1. Esta manzana está verde, aún no ha caído del árbol. 2. Esta manzana es verde y la otra es roja. One thing you can do to know which phrase you should use in Spanish is ask how it is? or what is it?. If you use the first question then you need to use estar, if you use the second question, then you need to use ser. Poner ejemplos: The second difference: show the origin, location and place Look at these verses: - Pierce Brosnan is Irish. Pierce Brosnan es irlandés. - Blarney Stone is in Ireland. - La piedra de Blarney está en Irlanda. - Leperchaun party is located in the Irish forest. - La fiesta de los Leperchaun es en los bosques irlandeses. The first sentence expresses the origin, where someone or something comes from us using ser, to express the location where someone or something is placed / located we use estar and to express where something takes place, we use ser.
