There are interesting tend to mergentes across various segments, which are expected to basically reape four dynamic industries. Despite near-term challenges, the medium to long-term growth history of gifts in Kenya remains solid. The gift industry in Kenya will continue to grow over the forecasted period and is expected to record a CAGR of 14.9% during 2020-2024. The gift market in the country will increase from US$260.2 million 2019 to reach US$434.8 million by 2024. The gift market in Kenya recorded substantial growth in the past few years. As one of the largest Eastern Africa economies, the technological advancement of the payment industry is largely the scope of gift market in Kenya. The market growth has been mainly backed by the rising adoption of gift cards by millennials and Gen Z consumers, expansion of the Retail sector, and growing inclination towards cryptocurrency. According to the Kenyan Communication Authority (CA), in 2019, Internet penetration was in 90 in Kenya. The increasing demand for Internet is rising due to rising smartphone transmission. This trend has supported leading the country's mobile services M-Pesa, which has over 25 million users in Kenya. It is noteworthy mentioning that, mobile rising services allowed 83% of Kenyans to gain access to formal financial services in 2019. Therefore, the rising adoption of alternative payment services such as mobile wallets is expected to create scope for the digital gift cards. Kenya's economic expansion during 2019, also supports the country's detail sector, and the country's leading shopping sector. The growing retail sector is also creating demand for gift cards. For example, multinational retailer like, Carrefour offers a wide range of gifts in Kenya. These gift cards can be recharge and available at Carrefour stores. Moreover, leading domestic shopping centers have launched and invested in gift card programs. These gift cards, which are also available in digital format allow users delivered to stores in the mail. In Kenya, demand for cryptocurrency bonds will increase. According to the Blockchain Association of Kenya, during 2018-2019, the total number of Bitcoin transactions measured at US$1.5 million. This trend is alternatively the breadth of growth of the gifts. This is due to the ease of buying gift cards and cash and trading them for cryptocurrencies, without revealing the user's identity.
