It was even earlier celebrated by Christians in the East, but they included it in their Epiphany celebration on Jan. 6, which focused more on Jesus' baptism. Christmas Celebrations in Rome replaced pagan sun festivals, held December 25th. The name Christmas comes from the Old English contraction of the Mass of Christ, which was first used in 1038. As a religious celebration, Christmas was fully embraced in the Middle Ages by the Catholic Church. After all, Christmas came to include many traditions, some not related to the birth of Christ. One of the most common properties for Christmas is gift giving. Many believe that the gift exchange was inspired by Santa Claus, later Santa Claus. This mythical figure originates in both religious and pagan folklore. He is believed to be based at St. Nicholas of Myra, as well as the popular pagan Nodic beliefs. When the reformation took place in the 19th century, there was a temporary transition away from celebrating Christmas. Many Protestants saw it as a Catholic feast and others as inaccurate pagan roots. At the beginning of America, there was little celebration of Christmas. Puritans who settled in New England did not approve and even banned it in Boston. Despite all this, Christmas was revived and reworked by writers like Charles Dickens and Washington Irving. These writers emphasized elements of Christmas, such as warm traditions, family, compassion and generosity. 1/15 Shutterstock/ Sascha BurkardWhy you travel far to the country to find your tree, or drive around town to the nearest Christmas tree farm, nothing beats the beloved tradition of cutting down your tree, or the piney smell that fills the whole house. Here's what it means. 2/15 Shutterstock/bodhichital don't know if there is anything that expresses a magical Christmas just like all these flashing lights. There's something warm and fuzzy about seeing all those other families who all have the same excitement about the holiday season. Of course, it wouldn't be complete without the lovely sound of Christmas music to get everyone into the spirit. Here are the most charming Christmas cities in America. 3/15 Shutterstock/FlavoredPixelIs there's a better smell than freshly baked holiday biscuits? Children of all ages like to decorate (and eat!) sugar cookies. Gift by giving, done! 5/15 FamVetd/ShutterstockBecause it's snow where you are, take a day (or two, or three) and go naked and have a snowball fight. It's so easy to get cooped up inside during the winter months, but getting bundled up and expending a little energy in the fresh air isn't all some good. If you live in the warmest places, why not have a winter picnic and eat these ice treats instead? 7/15 Shutterstock/OnlyZoiAHandmade decorations can't be simpler or more fun, and they make great gifts from kids. Start with a strong gingerbread biscuit dough or salt dough, then decorate with biscuit cutters, hand (or paw!) prints, rubber stamps, paints — no matter what you like! For another twist on homemade decorations, how about these popcorn balls? 8/15 Shutterstock/Yuganov KonstantinHelp your child to send a letter to Santa. Send it through the USPS Santa Mail, or believe in the program Macy's, which allows children to drop their letters in a special mailbox that delivers directly to the North Pole. The best part is, Macy's donates to the Make-A-Wish Foundation for every letter it receives. 9/15 Shutterstock/RomrodphotoGrab your sleeping car and snuggle up—it's sure to be a night to remember. Gazing up into your wooden lights will be magical for everyone. Maybe you doze off discussing your favorite moments last year, or talking about your plans for next year. 10/15 Shutterstock/AllieAndSebastianIn instead of a cocktail party, why not cookie exchange this year? Each pair brings a batch of their best cookie along with enough copies of printed recipes for everyone. To make it more competitive, you could also all vote for your favorite cookie, and the winner could receive a special prize (or just bragging rights!). Bonus points if you pair the event with an ugly sweater contest or a white elephant gift exchange. 11/15 Shutterstock/Elena ElisseevaBe it's a bonfire outside or one in your fireplace, one thing is certain: Everyone loves to gather with fire. Make sure there are fixin's on the smores and hot dogs to cook over the fire. Do you not have access to the fire, but still want smores? Here are 19 ways to make them. 12/15 Shutterstock/Yuganov KonstantinPaper snowflakes are an excellent craft for younger children; they easily do, require little supplies, and provide instant gratification. Then dig into the breakfast saucepan so everyone can power up to a day of fun and Bake cookies, do crafts, or maybe even have a movie marathon! Whatever you do, the day will be filled with great love and laughter. 14/15 Shutterstock / tomertuTo make your own snow in the world, you will need mason jars, glue, glitter, distilled water, glycerin and figurines you want to place in the world. Simply glue your ornaments with a wall jar lid. Then fill the jar almost on top with distilled water. Add a pinch (or more) glitter and a dash of glycerin. Tighten the lid tightly and swirl it around, causing the glow to be incorporated into the entire water. And there you have it! Your very own snow world. 15/15 Shutterstock/ 1000 WordsBundle up and walk around your neighborhood, offering hilarious music and warm smiles for everyone listening. In his popular story, Christmas Carol, Charles Dickens uses the musical term stave to point out chapters. Dickens was known at times to use clever terms to describe sections of his books. Like Cricket on the hearth, he calls the department to chirp. For modern readers, stave might not be the only unfamiliar term for a Christmas carol. To help you understand the text and increase your vocabulary, see a list of these terms separated by a chapter. Some words may be familiar, while others are no longer commonly used.
