I love turtles meaning

Taken from a viral internet video and meme, I like turtles as a non-humorous sequitur often used to point out you're blissfully clueless on a topic. Simp WAP Karen yeet Know your meme In Portland, Oregon Rose Festival on May 31, 2007, a boy named Jonathon was interviewed by a reporter who asked about the zombie face paint he received at the festival. She asked, Jonathon only had a great face paint job. What do you think? Jonathon replied: I like turtles. The unsym desirable cyming of this moment was enough to ruin her interview and, happily, she quickly continued. A viewer who caught the interview found the moment funny enough to upload to YouTube. Under the username 3mediapro, this video was uploaded on June 10, 2007 and it quickly collected hundreds of thousands of views, inspired by countless remixes and parody, and even launched I liked turtle-themed products such as T-shirts. News interviewed Jonathon after his video went viral to ask why he wanted to answer the way he did. He said he just went to the turtle show near the face-painting booth. A combination of excitement about the tortoises and the tension about the interview led him to gush out the famous phrase. By April 2017, the video had amassed over 55 million views. My passion for turtles persisted for many years after the first meme went viral. There have been a lot of attempts to track down I like turtle zombie kid, as he is often called. When you do not know what else to say or do not think that a question is worth answering, you can answer I like turtles as a dismissal of your own questions or knowledge on a topic. I like turtles can also be just a random funny statement. This does not mean an official definition of me as turtle as most of the terms we define on Dictionary.com, but an official word summary that hopefully touches on important aspects of my meaning and usage as will help our users expand their word mastery. Trends January 1 1 I Like Turtles was the first phrase uttered by ten-year-old Jonathon Ware in a local news interview at the Rose Festival in Portland, Oregon. After airing and uploading to YouTube in late May 2007, Curt Jonathan's response to the reporter's lackluster question went viral, inspiring a series of video remixes and web meedoques. Origin May 31, 2007, ten-year-old Jonathan Ware visited the Rose Festival in Portland, Oregon. During a visit to the fair, Jonathan drew his face that looked like a Zombie and was approached by kgw local news reporter Nancy Francis. When asked to comment on painting his face on camera, Jonathan tersely replied I like turtles. A copy of the KGW newsletter was uploaded online ten days after airing by YouTuber 3mediapro, who apparently realized early on that the embarrassing moment on air was so too valuable to let slip away. Nancy Francis: Back here living in the Waterfront Village with my zombie friend, Jonathon. You look beautiful, Jonathon. Jonathon just had a great face paint job. What do you think? Jonathan: I like turtles! Going viral throughout June 2007, the clip went viral on YouTube, attracting millions of views while giving birth to dozens of parody and mashup videos starring Jonathan. Around the same time, several T-shirts bearing the slogan appeared on electronic goods websites such as Zazzle, Snorgtees, CafePress. Screened and Shirtstastegood. Although the boy and his family were initially unaware of the viral sensation during the start, Jonathan's sister finally discovered her brother's fame on Myspace in early July, and in August, local news station KGW reunited with the Wares family for a follow-up interview to hear their reaction to the newly discovered internet Jonathan. On September 15, 2010, Jonathan appeared in an episode of Tosh.0 as part of the web redemption series. He explained that on the day the video was recorded, he had just seen a turtle exhibit before painting his face, and that's why he had turtles in his mind. On November 3, 2007, an entry for I like turtles was sent to the Urban Dictionary, which defined the phrase as an answer to a boring question you didn't want to answer. It is also possible, in rare cases, to express a person's true love for turtles. Even years after the video went viral, Jonathan's legacy was recognized by the now-inexisting viral news site Urlesque in the 100 Most Iconic Internet Video column series in April 2009. Gaming Channel In September 2013, Ware launched itsTurtleTime YouTube channel, with many Let's Play videos showcasing various video games (shown below). Search interest Google Search queries for the phrase I like turtles saw the largest spike in July 2007, about a month after the original video was uploaded to YouTube. The search query saw a spike in September 2010, which may correspond to the arrival of Tosh.0. Do you feel a sense of confirmation only if you are crazy busy?
