Also how to speed and type lines into this? If I see fish on sonar at 15 feet down how I'm going to set my lines as far as running on them or right on them? 04-01-2018, 08:39 PM #2 Line out depth 15 8 20 10 22 12 25 14 30 16 36 18 42 20 50 22 58 24 65 26 70 28 75 30 80 32 86 34 92 36 105 38 125 40 This should be closed, line size will have this effect try to present a few feet above your target marker 04-02-2018, 10:29 #3 That looks like a dive curve for #40 Tru-Trips.... Luhr Jensen Jet Divers runs a much lower curve.... means it takes a lot more lines. Straight line type figure in steam ... Here are the dive curves for both if using 30 # PowerPro: Code: #40 Tru-Trip #40 Jet Diver (Top Hole) 30 # PowerPro 30 # PowerPro Depth Line Out Depth Line Out 8 15 8 10 20 10 28 12 22 12 36 14 25 14 43 15 25 15 16 30 16 50 17.5 35 17 18 18 60 2042 20 70 22 50 22 80 24 58 24 90 26 65 26 105 28 70 28 118 30 75 30 134 32 80 32 150 34 34 170 35 88 35 36 92 36 190 38 105 38 40 125 40 Speed can affect depth, Higher speeds will allow you to dive deeper , but these are very suitable in the dive curve from 1.5 to 2.5 . . . Smaller lines will give you greater depth, larger diameters will give you less depth, but only by a small percentage. If you are pulling large tables, there is a slight increase in your towing line from board to boat. That itself will occupy a few feet of change in the water column. If you're marking fish at 20 feet, I'll set my first line at 18-22 back, which is checking fish high, you may not see, or fish that want to come up to hit baits, usually in cleaner water. All the other lines I want to set at 35-40-45, then see what hits. If all your fish start coming in at 35 and 40, re-set your other leads to that. Try a 37 or 38, split the difference ... Few important things to remember: BIG differences in dive curves from a TT #40 to a jetdiver #40 best.... in addition, pull the baits on the walleye. Walleye hangs usually won't come down to get a bait, they eat up. Walleyes bottom may be different... they'll pick a primer off the bottom, but we're not usually trolling for bottom residents! So once you figure out the depth they want, then the color and type of bait, along with the speed, then combine it with their preferred direction – you'll be whackin'em! Experiment a little every day, and pay attention to what leads are caught.... After the first few fish, hopefully a model will start to grow. Good luck! 04-02-2018, 10:31 AM #4 Sorry..... i forgot to mention i'm pulling #40 Tru-Trips.... 04-02-2018, 11:48 am #5 Eric mentioned your question quite well. For setting up an attraction in depth to try and catch the fish displayed on your sonar. Your sonar unit can be one or two feet below the waterline when mounted at the bottom of the boat so that the fish marker can be a few feet deeper than the mark if directly under the boat. But if the fish aside will be shallower than shown. So it's a range. Fish in clean water can go up 10ft or more to grab a lure. It's less in dirty water. That's why you want to include the original water column as capt Eric says. 04-02-2018, 12:38 PM #6 Thank you for the great feedback. Shallow Bandits will run behind #40 TT, but 90% of the time, if we're running Deep Bandits, it's not divers or weights. 04-04-2018, 12:10 PM #10 all this is great information. remember that they are giving you this based on the fact that you have calibrated your roll. so when your roll says you're 85 years old, you're actually 85 years old again. Jet Diver is a simple trolling system to use that exactly positions a lure at 10, 20, 30, 40, or 50 feet. Basically, attach the selected jet diver and give off 100' of the line to achieve the desired depth. The #50 dived to an altitude of 50 ft. The #40 dived to a height of 10 m. The #30 to 30 ft. #20 to 20 ft and #10 dive to 10 ft. It's true but only if you troll at exactly 2.5 mph, with nylon monofilament of 25 pounds in fresh water. And if you only have one #30 Jet Diver and the lake bottom is at 20'. How many wires do you have to give away? Or the south bottom is 20' while the north coast is 40', will you change your diver every half ride around? This way, even if it's only about 10 bucks, 10 each is $50. Spend $0.99 and fish any depth. Even if this diver is one of the easiest to use, the Dipsy Troller app will help you use it best in any situation.
