Edit Comments Share CheerleaderMember of The Pink Ladies ParentsMichael Carrington (cousin) Sandra Dee Sandy Olsson (born 1941) is one of Grease's protagonists. Sandy and her family moved to America from Australia after the summer vacation. He and Michael Carrington (from Grease 2) are cousins. She's also Danny Zuko's girlfriend. She didn't become a member of Pink Ladies because director Rizzo thought she was too clean to be pink, although at the end of the film she is accepted as a female liposuctionist. Sandy is played by Olivia Newton-John in the 1978 film, Julianne Hough in the 2016 performance, Danielle Hope on the 2017 UK tour and Skye Hunt in the 2017 version performance (along with her co-star and singer Nathan Parker, who portrayed Hunt's love interest). Appearance[edit | edit source] Sandy is a very beautiful young woman with blond hair, blue eyes and light skin. For most of the film Sandy wears very feminine clothes, such as a set of skirts and sweaters, which are always in pastel colours such as yellow, pink, etc. On National Dance-Off, she wears a white dress and white heels (and albeit only briefly, white panties). At the end of the film, Sandy undergoes a makeover to surprise Danny, so she appears to be wearing a women's grease outfit. Personality[edit | edit source] Sandy is very good natured, speaks kindly to everyone and has a very soft and sweet personality. She was considered too clean unlike the other Pink Ladies of Rizzo. At Frenchy's sleeping party, drinking a cigarette and dessert wine - along with seeing blood - made her sick. He's confident, a little naïve, and he can get hurt easily. Eventually, she gained confidence and changed her clean image and adopted a fiercer, sexier appearance and attitude to be with Danny, who at the end of the school year had his letters on track to soften his image for him. Synopsis[edit | edit source] Summer nights In the summer of 1958, local boy Danny Zuko and the holidaying Sandy Olsson meet on the beach and fall in love. When summer ends, Sandy, who returns to Australia, fears they may never see each other again, but Danny tells her that their love is just the beginning. After that, the film will move on to the beginning of rydell high school's senior season. When her parents decide to move to America, Sandy enrolls in Rydell and Frenchy befriends her. Unaware of each other's presence at school, Danny and Sandy tell their groups about the events during the couple's brief romance (Summer Nights). After learning that Danny Zuko was Sandy's summer sweetheart, Rizzo arranged for the duo to reunite, but Danny was under pressure to maintain his bad-boy attitude in front of his mates, upsetting Sandy. He runs away and cries. Later, Frenchy invites Sandy to a pajama party at her home, but Sandy got sick from trying and sipming a cigarette with imported dessert wine. He got his ears pierced by Frenchy, saw the blood, got sick and threw up. After T-Birds stumbled upon the party and left with Rizzo, Sandy reflected on her feelings for Danny (Hopelessly dedicated to you). Some time later, at Frosty Palace, Danny tried to apologize: It was me, but it wasn't me. He rejected her - he was with Tom Chisum, whom Sandy describes as a simple person. Danny points out: Too bad his brain is bicep. Danny also denies being jealous and says he can spin circles around those morons. Sandy replies, I'll believe it when I see it. Danny did it and finally decided to become a runner. He saw Sandy with Tom and picked up the pace by jumping into the hurdles, but he crossed it and took a header as he jumped over the hurdles. He ran to see if he was ok, showing that he still cared about her. He gave her quiet treatment, but he eventually tricked her into talking, and they decided to get a second chance to be together. They tried to go on a date at Frosty Palace, but Pink Ladies and T-Birds Rizzo and Kenickie are fighting. The school dances arrived, broadcast live on television, and Danny and Sandy got together. During the dance, maybe drunk Sonny came in and pulled Sandy away from Danny. Cha-Cha DiGregorio, who once dated Danny, took it as a sign and performed with Hand Jien. Sandy left, and Danny and Cha-Cha won the dance. Later, Danny tried to get to Sandy by taking her to the drive-in. Danny gave Sandy the ring. He asked her to go steady, she said yes and declared that she really respected him. Later, Danny tried to identify with Sandy, but he slammed the door on her, threw the ring in her face and ran away. Danny's heartbroken (Sandy Song) and he believed they belonged together. Sandy knew Rizzo thought he was too clean, but that didn't stop him from offering to help when there were rumors that Rizzo was knocked up. Rizzo rebuffed the offer and said he could take care of himself and everyone else who got in his way. Sandy was just leaving when Rizzo called her and thanked her sincerely. The Thunder Road race arrived, Sandy watches from afar, and after Danny won, he concluded that he still loved her, but began to believe that his two-shoe picture didn't sit well in America (Look at me, I'm Sandra Dee (reprimand). He's asking Frenchie to help him. Some time later, on the last day of school, the class celebrated their graduation in the schoolyard at the carnival. Danny had become an athlete, but he was shocked when Sandy appeared, dressed in black - a leather jacket, tight satin pants, a shoulder top, red heels, his hair teased, makeup, hoop earrings and a cigarette in his hand. In the song, the duo admitted to loving each other and united (You're The One That I Want). The film ended with Danny and Sandy leaving in a completely cheated Greased Lightning car together, which then took off, resulting in the pair waving goodbye to their friends (We Go Together). Two years later in 1961 (Grease 2), Sandy's cousin Michael Carrington arrives in Rydell as a British exchange student in his senior year.
