Aldi district manager trainee salary

ManufacturingProject ManagementRetailSalesSoftware DevelopmentSportsUnited States Connecticut South Windsor Minnesota FaribaultAverage ALDI District Manager weekly in the United States is approximately $ 1,000, which meets the national average. Salary information is 174 data points collected directly from employees, users, and job advertisements passed and present on Indeed in the last 36 months. Please note that all salary amounts are approximations based on third-party submissions to Indeed. These numbers are given only to fact users for the purpose of generalized comparison. The minimum wage may differ by jurisdiction and you should consult the employer for the actual amounts of the salary. So I was offered a job as district manager at Aldi. I've seen a lot of criticism on Glassdoor saying that the pros are the big pay and benefits and that the cons are that you work too hard. It seems that most of the critics think that this scam outweighs the professionals. All the district managers I interviewed with said great things to say about working for Aldi. I want to see what Reddit says about becoming a district manager. My questions are, how many hours do you work per week on average? How many weekends a month? If you're still working at Aldi, what do you like and dislike? If you're not with Aldi anymore, what made you leave the company?
