Google new sites

In addition to direct bookmarks, shared stuff bookmarklets also allow you to email pages (integrated with your Gmail account) and use bookmarklets to share or bookmark pages on other services, from Digg ordel.icio.us to Facebook or Furl. Check out some of the features of Google Share Stuff in the gallery below. G/O Media should get 68% commission off 2 years + 3 months FreeLifehacker photo gallery thumbnail. If you're seeing this with an RSS reader, click here to view the Google Shared Content Photo Gallery in a Javascript-enabled web browser. Curiously, the shared stuff is still not completely snorting, but surprisingly buggy. I noticed a big delay between the time I shared the item and the time it appeared on the Shared Items page. Also, bookmarklets couldn't share the same page twice unless I did so at the same time, i.e. I couldn't add a site to my shared stuff page, close the bookmarklet window, and launch the bookmarklet again to email the page to a friend. This is a strange hodgepodge and careless offering from Google, but the underlying idea (such as broad integration with your Google Account) shows promise. Shared staff [Google via Google operating system] Google suffered some downtime on Monday afternoon. Google News, the company's automated news aggregator, went down at around 4.m Monday. Users from the East Coast to the West Coast to Canada reported that the site was not available for at least 30 minutes. When a user tries to access the Google News service, they receive a server error message. Confirming the confusion, a Google spokesperson apologized for the suspension. Before today, Google News was temporarily not available to some users, she said in an email to Computer World. When you exited from 1.25 (PT) to around 1:54 PT, you may receive a server error message and you may see instructions to try the request again later. This issue has been resolved. Users immediately noted the outage and vented their frustration about it on Twitter. User awilbert tweeted: Google News looks down and suddenly I feel all cut off from the world. Another, mme_hardy added: I want my Google News back. Waa Google had a problem with the Google News service in 2009. The first went down for 14 hours in February 2009 and then offline for several hours in September. Google never specified the cause of these problems. Google expanded all its users, businesses, or other sites today, so I thought I'd take it for a quick test run. After the jump, check out our impressions. Read the rest of this post on AppScout. (Image Credit: Google) Google Sites is a Google website builder that can be used to create a fairly advanced website in just a few minutes. The platform uses a drag-and-drop editor, so you don't have to touch the HTML code to build a new website. The best part of creating a Google Site website is that it's completely free. You'll need a Google Account to get started. This guide provides instructions for setting up a new website on Google Sites. To get started, head to the website of the Google site on site. google.com.Google Sites interface (image credit: Google) 1. The first thing you need to do to create a new Web site that selects a name and address is to select a name and URL. By default, site URLs are sites.google.com/view/yourstername. The URL of the site must be unique. Website URLs must be unique (image credit: Google) Do you have your own URL? Click the gear icon, and then click the Custom URL tab. Enter the URL and redirect to the new Web site. Google Sites provides eight templates to help you kickstart your design. These are fully customizable, so don't worry too much about this choice. When you select a template (image credit: Google) template that you can use on Google Sites, the site editor appears. In the Navigation Pane, click the Themes tab, and then select a theme for the site. Theme options change the overall look and feel of color palettes, fonts, and websites. 3. Edit site layout Each page on Google Sites is divided into sections that have their own layout. To create a new section with a specific layout, go to the Insert tab of the edit window. Layout has six basic page section types: When you click one, a new section containing the layout is added to the bottom of the current page. The default layout available within Google Sites. (Image Credit: Google) Drag the pattern of 10 dots to the left of each section to move the section up or down. You can also remove sections by clicking on the symbol on the garbage can. To add a new page to the Web site where you want to create the page, go to Pages, hover over the plus sign, and then click New Page. Name the page and customize the URL address as needed. You can customize how pages appear in your site by dragging and dropping new page positions in the edit window.Show a new page on your website (image credit: Google) 5. There are many options for adding content to a Web site where you want to add content. You can create text boxes to upload images or create sources from Google Drive. You can also add them to your website by selecting special elements such as buttons, image carousels, and Google Maps displays. Use content elements to add images and text to your Web site. You can drag and drop content elements that you add to the (Image Credit: Google) site. You can also resize content elements by simply clicking and dragging the edges. 6. General Website Management We recommend that you configure your site settings before publishing a new website. Click the gear icon to change the style of the navigation menu and add a logo if you have one. You can also connect your site to Google Analytics to track the amount of traffic.
