This will be a little involved, but bear with me: 'Daemon' originally comes from the ancient Greek word meaning the existence of supernatural forces. It can be applied not only to the gods, but also to fewer spirits. Therefore, technically, aphrodite, goddess of love and sex, and the most desirable woman that exists can be claimed to be called Daemon.At at the same time, and many ancient cultures have spirits in the myth that we call them demons with a very sexual and seductive nature. Mesopotamia ekimm, for example, was a type of vampire/sex demon who seduced men and was considered horribly beautiful. Christian mythology believed in what was called incubus, the male devil who had sex with sleeping women, and a female version called Succubus, which had sex with sleeping men. Both were considered supernaturally attractive. In Scotland, baobansis (I think if anyone knows the correct spelling, I'm spelling it wrong!) is a race of beautiful women (with hooves for their feet) who seduced men and drank blood. Irish Leanne Sid was a female spirit creature who inspired poets with her beauty, but often killed them by erasing their vitality. Satan himself, originally called Lucifer in the Bible, is said to be the most beautiful of angels. So, in other words, demons and demonic creatures have always had a lot of color! The classic images of Satan (goat legs, red skin, horns, tails) were inspired by ancient Greek satyas and bread (goat's foot men), and these were often painted with rough skin. Claws and fangs represent the devil's idea as one side of the great beastin the Bible. I don't know where the white hair comes from, but you're talking anime and a lot of girls with green/blue/pink hair, so I'm not going to lose a lot of sleep on top of not being able to explain it! It reflects thousands of years of long views of their humanity as highly sexual and captivating creatures. Of course, there are a lot of other demons that are described as horrible and scary. Egyptian mythology speaks of demonic creatures with crocodile heads, lion fronts and hippo rears, and I vaguely read and recall about the Japanese devil, which was a cross between a man and a turtle. So, while the ancients saw some demons as sexual and attractive, there were plenty of other creatures that looked really horrible and disgusting! (Redirected from Elven's characteristics) Piotr Waisocki's last elf The elves have their own labor and their own sorrows, and have little interest in the Hobbit way or any other creature on earth - Gildor Inglegion[1] Elf is the most beautiful creature in Arda, a race much more beautiful than men, generally high (about 6 feet). [Source?Among them, the people who went to Ballinore were the fairest and had the biggest skills of the body. Elves had sharper sensations, vision and hearing than males, slender, graceful yet strong, but resistant to the extremes of nature, disease and disease. However, many Nordor died at the intersection of Helkalux. Practical considerations, including the many occasions when men were mistored for elves (especially Thulin Turanbal), suggest that the point of difference between elves and men was subtle. [Edit] Pointed Ears It is open for speculation whether Elvish's ears were pointed, but [2][3] it should be noted that there is no explicit reference to Elvish's ear pointed at the Hobbit, Lord of the Rings or Silmarillion. The wording (the 1937-8 language manuscript was published posthumously) states that The Quendian ears were pointed and leaf-shaped than humans. [4] In another language manuscript (ca. from 1959-60), Elvish's connection between the ears and the leaves is once again noted: 'Amon Lo. †SLAS-, ears. Russ. leaves. Slus &t;Q Frahl, S Ihaw. [6] When answering a question about the Hobbit's ear, Tolkien wrote that he was slightly pointed and elvish. Some fans take this to mean elvish ears have been pointed out, while others claim it is an ambiguous statement. [2] [3] [9] [Edit] Hair color In general, Vanya was a golden hair, with the name Van Jar, referring to their brightly colored hair, meaning fair in Kenya. [Source?Other Elves - Nordor, Sindall, and- Had dark brown or dark hair like Finwe or Mae Glynn. [10] [Note 1] Lutyen Tynwiel and her distant descendant Arwen Undmiel were both described as the fairest of all elves, with dark hair. In addition, it was explained that there was silver hair between the royal family of Terelli and Sindal, and that Thingol, Shirdan and Cerebone all had silver hair. In some cases, elves had atypical hair color, either for simple coincidences or marriages between clans. A classic example is the royal family of Nordor and its descendants: Milliel Selinde of Nerdor, the first wife of Finvel and the mother of Fairnor, who is described as having silver hair. Fairnor himself had crow's dark hair, but not all sons of Fairnor shared this trait. Mayolas and twins Amrod and Amlas had Auburn hair (but Amrod's hair darkened from childhood). [14]: 355 This unusual reddish-brown hair color was characteristic of Nerdanel's relatives for her father, Mahtan, and had Epesse Rusco's Fox. [14]: 353 Finalfin, the youngest son of Finvet, and his descendants had golden hair for Finve's second wife, Vanyar's Indys. Finan's daughter Galadriel displayed a very rare hair color that is not observed anywhere else. Her golden silver hair, said to be dazzlingly beautiful (the light of two trees, Laureline and Terperion, was caught in her tresses). Another Knoord with a remarkable hair color was Groffindiel, who has that hair described as shining gold in color. [16] Idol, the daughter of Targon, king of Gondrin, inherited her golden hair from her mother, Vanyar's Eleanor. Slanduil, the father of Legolas and Sindaline Elf, is said to have golden hair in the Hobbit, but the color of his son Legolas' own hair has not been recorded. The color of the golden hair is sometimes implied among other elves: Amros, the Rotarian Sindaline elf, is one such case who has been described as bright and shines like a spark of gold in the sun. In Lord of the Rings, a very similar reference is made to a Rotarian elf with hair that shines like gold in the sun. [18] [Edit] Eye Color When Tolkien describes Elben's eyes, they tend to turn gray. This certainly applies not only to Lutyen and Elron and his children (Alwen, Elladan and Erlohill), but to her descendants, including Aragorn and Dunedine. Volornwae, who led the man Toole to Gondrin, also had gray eyes. He was half Nordlin, but Maegrin is said to have dark eyes (probably from his father Elle, who was not Nordor's father), while Orve (brother of Lutyen's father, Singol, king Terelin) had blue eyes. Since the color of most other elves' eyes is not mentioned, it will be difficult to generalize. [Editing] Other features of the elf were like the ainur of the spirit. They loved nature, especially the water, the sea and all the beauty of the stars, because they were the first things they saw.As a result, Ulmo and Varda were the Ainur closest to them. They were marked by exciting curiosity and a desire for learning and creation. They hated all evil and were usually more reluctant to rot than men unless they fooled them in a fair form like Antar. Conversely, their work harmed evils like Lemba and Elvenrope that brought pain to Gollum's skin. But they were more likely to be influenced by greed, pride and jealousy, as tyled by the story of Fairnor's house, or the monkey's jealousy and unwarranted hatred of Thulin. Elder can manipulate Sanwe Rtiya (Cueña in open thought or telepathy) and communicate with thoughts (Osanwe). Like men and dwarves, elves slept. In the two towers, he says of Legolas: [He] is already lying motionless, his fair hands folded over his chest, his eyes not closed, blending the night and deep dreams of living just like an elf. Also, like men, elves guarded their hands. Although elves were generally considered the most powerful of Ilvatar's children, there is a description that some men in the first-age great family were less agile but physically strong. The Dragon Helm is said to have been given to Fingon, but in all the flutters, the head and shoulders could not be found sturdy enough to easily take the helm of the little one, so the hike gave it to Hador, the man.
