Eden pure heaters

© 1996-2015, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates heater maker EdenPure has been told to discontinue its claims that portable heaters are safer, superior and save more than other heaters. Suarez Corp, the manufacturer, can continue to boast that heaters are made in the United States. After reviewing by the electronic retail app itself set up. Consumer reports recently included an EdenPure model in its tests of portable heaters but it did not make the list of the top eight picks. Among some of the claims EdenPure investigated by the ERSP were: ... The new EdenPure warms better, faster, saves more on heating bills, and runs almost off. ... Built in the U.S. using patent pending unique dual heating technology. Children and pets can come to EdenPure's cabinet and touch it and do no harm. While the Made in America claim passed the crusher, Ad Watch concluded that advertisers could not support monthly savings claims and should cut off comparative safety and excellence claims. The company was also asked to discontinue child safety claims. In the Consumer Space Heater Experiments report, the large EdenPure Gen4, $397, was moderate in room heating and worse at spot heating. But as the company claims, it was very quiet and also cold enough to touch safely. Other brands in our experiments became hot enough to cause burns. EdenPure also lacks a tip-over safety switch. Two other large heaters generally performed better including durafume 10HM4126-0107, $230, and HT-XL heat wave, $400. EdenPure has made headlines before, including last year when Costco pulled the U.S. EdenPure 1000 from its shelves after getting reports that it had tended to overheat. Edenpour said this is an isolated incident and the company is investigating all reports of overheating of units or causing fires.
