Notes are the format in which songs are saved. Notes start with blank music paper consisting of charts that have five rows and four spaces, each representing a note. Songwriters who create songs in standard music notation use staff paper to create notes, which can then be passed on to musicians who interpret notes for a musical performance. Today, creating your own note is easier than ever. With notation software such as Finale or the free online Noteflight service, anyone can turn their musical ideas into professional music sheets. Introduction of Noteflight (see Resources). Noteflight is a free Web-based music notation service that lets you write, print, and even save notes as music files to play. Noteflight has a clean, easy-to-use interface that allows even beginners to create a song in notes. Because Noteflight lets you listen to what you've written, you can experiment with different notes until you create something that sounds good, even if you don't know the musical composition. Create a Noteflight account and sign in to start creating notes. You can start writing a song immediately. At the top of the page on the toolbar, click The New Score button to create a blank document with notes. Choose whether you want the notes to be private or shared. Noteflight shows you a blank sheet of music in a C key with a 4/4 time signature. Click Edit Title at the top of the notes and type the name of the song, and then click Edit Composer and type your name. On the Result menu, make any changes to the key signature or over time by using the Change Time command or change the key signature. Add notes and rest to the notes by clicking on the empty music staff. The note head appears, and then you can drag and click where you want the note to appear. You can also use the Pivot Palette to select different note durations. When you insert note notes, notes will automatically format the notes to keep the right number of strokes on the bar. To listen to what you wrote at any time, go to the Play menu and select the playback option you want. Print notes when you're done creating a song. The result will be a professional result of the composition of the song. You can also use Noteflight to make an audio file theme. Noteflight allows you to assign the actual sounds of the instrument to the corresponding parts. Go to File and select Export to save the finished note as an MP3 or .wav file. This allows you to take an example of a recording to an assembly. Musicians of the world, your dreams have just come true. Some souls of sorts have come up with a Kindle for notes, and it's called Gvido – a dual-screen E Ink device that digital scores and all these loose leaf paper exploding time and time again. A child brain company from Terrada Music Score based in Tokyo, Gvido consists of a 13.3-inch Mobius flexible electronic paper display, approximately the same size as the actual music sheet, with a resolution of 1200 x 1600 pixels. But now, instead of browsing the physical pages, you can swipe through this thin, light device as you pass through the piece. Gvido claims to support long service life due to the low power consumption of its e-paper, and thanks to the Wi-Fi and Bluetooth features, you can actually buy the results directly from the Internet, and download them to your device. And don't worry – if you want to make annotations in your results, you'll still be able to do so with Gvido. According to the company, the device comes with a digital pen that allows users to make notes directly on the e-ink page, and write to any markings in a PDF format. The microSD card slot and internal memory should also provide plenty of storage space, supporting exploration of musical compositions from baroque to modern times. Unfortunately, there is no automatic page rotation function (which is really what we need), and the demo video suggests that the process of rotating the page (tap or swipe the device) is a bit slow. Still, this may be just one of the most exciting technological innovations for musicians in recent memory, so if you're tired of trying to organize reassive notes on a shelf, consider Gvido instead. Editorial Recommendations MERGERS MAY BE FURIOUS In the United States; but in China, the party line is completely different: small businesses are beautiful. This policy, representing a change of mindset, could soon benefit small American companies interested in doing business in the People's Republic.China's powerful State Economic Commission has launched major efforts to attract small businesses from the West. The new program reflects growing dissatisfaction with large companies, especially those in Japan that sell VCR's and other consumer products that do little to grow China's backward economy. What China needs, says Wu Qian, who heads the program, is the exchange of technological know-how and small business management skills that can help the country's long-term development. The Economic Commission plans to connect foreign entrepreneurs with small Chinese companies that are outside the mainstream of Guangzhou, Shanghai and Beijing. So far, says Wu, this would be difficult to achieve. The Chinese will help to cope with language problems, high rents and Byzantine regulations, which have problems with the visiting of the country by the management. China attaches greater importance to estimated 383 000 small, local businesses. Often owned by collectives or regional region in 1984, these companies grew 30% faster than their larger Counterparts controlled by Beijing. These small businesses can play an important role in preventing the mass urban migration that is plaguing many other developing countries, according to the Economic Commission. Small and medium-sized enterprises have a lower level of management and are close to people's needs, says Wu. We strongly see these small businesses as more important in the future for our economic development. Music stand They had a sale in the music store on the same music stands that they use in real orchestras, or so they say. They have heavy bases without tilting and simple adjustments for lifting and tilting the table. The only thing I would appreciate more was the heavier grade of sheet metal on the easel part, or maybe metal instead of plastic tilt edination ... you get what you pay for... IKEA JANSJO LED desk lamp Lamps are ready (IKEA is Swedish) in several bright colors so choose the one you want. I'm not sure what LED lamp is rated, but it's probably 1 or 2 watts of light which is actually very bright. It works pretty cool. The electronics of the wall wart adapter are located in the end of the wall plug. It has a built-in on/off switch. Please note that there are two models or versions of the desk lamp. One is in a more compact box, and the other is packed in a longer box. The difference is how the flexible shaft is attached to the base. This one in a short box is configured with two mounting posts with screw screws. The longer box contains a version of the lamp in which the flexible shaft has indented threads, so it is mounted in the base, securing the nut. I chose a short box one of the two mounting stations, so it will resist the torque better and not work loose when mounted. They also have the same head lamp or lightweight device already attached to what looks like a giant spring clip instead of a heavy desk base. The flexible shaft is slightly thinner and shorter. But it costs $30US as opposed to $10US. Why do you get less but spend more? I went for the $10 version. There is also a similar type of SUNNAN LED lamp that has solar cells for $20, but I found it a hassle to move it back to sunlight to charge the lamp battery. You can customize this lamp if you need something more portable.. Other shelf shelving lamps needed too much work to mod fit it and adapt to the music rack. Filling plate I will not use the base that comes with the lamp, There is a heavy disc with an iron core and sheet metal cover that goes along with it. I'll make a custom filler plate that creates an iron disk slot so that can be placed and mounted directly on the music stand. You can make this filler plate from most rigid, metal, wooden, plastic... I used some tiny scraps of stash plate from my TARDIS design to make a filler plate. I had some silver spray spray laying around which I use to dress the filling plate. The remnants of Krill gold paint from my Stargate gong would be too flashy, but some people like that lexus touch emblem. You need a drill/controller with different drillbits. CAUTION: Learn how to use power tools correctly. Metal shards from the drilling of the music stand should be carefully removed. Non-slip, sandy finish on the music stand can have sharp edges. If you have little ones at home, coming up with activities to occupy them can sometimes be a challenge. There are a few games, though, that kids can play with each other and you can join in the fun too! One such game is singing action songs. Singing is not only fun for children, but also a great way to create a solid foundation in terms of motor and communication skills. Motor skills are the ability to control small muscles in the body, including fingers, fingers, tongue, and mouth. Singing allows toddlers to exercise muscles around the mouth. Children's songs usually have rhyming words that expose children to acoustic skills and sound awareness. According to Scholastic, this will allow them to speak, speak and learn to read with greater ease. Moreover, singing with parents is intended to foster mutual communication skills at a young age. Songs that include action and movement will also help toddlers with rhythm, spatial awareness, balance and coordination. Here are 3 popular children's songs to which you can introduce your child. These songs also include easy dance moves that go hand in hand with lyrics that will allow your little ones to move around. Texts (fragment) Do your ears say low?
