We have more options than ever to get our TV show and movie set. For those who are still watching live TV, we'd like to know which device you're using to record. Streaming options have become better and better – even to the point where providers like Netflix and Amazon create original content. But live television is still one of the best ways to keep up with current shows. Whether you're recording shows using your cable provider, HTPC or any other device, we'd like to know: images of Jason Whittaker (flickr), Brandon Blinkenberg (Shutterstock) and Geralt (pixabay). Disney Plus offers users thousands of hours of content, but is this streaming platform a live TV available to subscribers? Are Disney Plus bundles with Hulu and ESPN+ live? Here's what we know about this subscription service: Disney+ (Plus) logo | Photo An illustration by Rafael Henrique/SOPA Images/LightRocket via Getty Images Disney's streaming service, Disney Plus, launched Nov. 12, 2019. After months of waiting, Disney finally launched its own streaming platform. For a monthly or annual fee, Disney Plus subscribers have access to thousands of hours of Disney's original TV shows and movies. Some content dating back to the 1930s, Disney Plus library rivals, to other subscription services, such as Netflix. In addition, this streaming platform offers subscribers more than just Disney-produced content. Movies and TV shows produced by Pixar, National Geographic, Lucasfilm and Marvel appear on Disney Plus subscribers on the binge-watch. It includes record-breaking films such as Marvel's recently released film, Avengers: Endgame and James Cameron's Avatar. Shows and movies on Disney television networks appear on this streaming platform. This includes the Disney Channel series Hannah Montana, That's So Raven and Suite Life of Zack and Cody. Disney Junior shows like Fancy Nancy, Mickey Mouse Clubhouse and Elena Avalor. However, some fans are still wondering whether this streaming platform comes with live television. Currently, Disney Plus does not have live television. Unfortunately, Disney Plus does not offer its subscribers live television. The closest thing to live television that Disney Plus offers is its own television series, which periodically premiere only on the streaming platform. New episodes of the recently released series, including Mandalorian, World Says Jeff Goldblum and High School Musical: The Musical: Series, premiere Disney Plus week. The streaming platform also produces original movies, such as the live-action adaptation of Lady and the Tramp. Even more content is available to subscribers, with opportunities to buy bundles from other streaming platforms such as Hulu and ESPN+. Disney Plus, Hulu and ESPN+ bundle come live TV? Unfortunately, Disney Plus does not offer subscribers live television for their services. Regarding ESPN+ according to Oregon Live, while ESPN Plus does not give you access to a large selection of live games in pro and college sports, the service does not give you access to live sports and programs broadcast live on ESPN, ESPN2 and ESPNU, E Classic and ESPN News. To view these channels, you need to log on to the cable provider. For some subscribers, however, Hulu offers a Live Television package. If you're already a Hulu subscriber to this package, you are eligible for the Disney Plus bundle. Without a Disney Plus bundle, Hulu (with Ads) and live television cost subscribers $44.99 per month. Hulu (without Ads) and live television costs $50.99 per month. However, from December 18, the skinny bouquet will raise its fee to $55 a month, up from $44.99. Contact Hulu for more information about your bundle prices. Regardless of whether the subscriber splurges for live television, this bundle still saves subscribers a significant amount of money. According to Business Insider, ordering a bundle costs users $18.99 per month, while individually, services are valued at $23.97 per month. But can soaps pull a similar trick and rise from the ashes of withdrawal? Some people think so. The last few years haven't been great for soap opera fans. In the 1970s, daytime TV was crowded with a dozen or more soaps like Guiding Light, as the world turns, all my children and another world. But changing lifestyles meant that in 2009, there were only eight daytime soaps aired every day on TV. Now, ten years later, the number of soaps is down to just four: Young and Restless, Bold and Beautiful, General Hospital, and the days of our lives. Susan Lucci says she's open to All My Children reboot Susan Lucci as Erica Kane in the 2011 episode All My Kids | Carol Kaelson/ABC via Getty Images For more than 40 years, Susan Lucci played conniving Erica Kane on ABC's All My Children. From 1970 to 2011, when the show was canceled, Lucci's character planned his way through Pine Valley, with the actress finally earning a Daytime Emmy for her efforts in 1999, after 18 consecutive nominations. Lucci said he would be interested in returning to the role that made him famous. He wasn't happy about canceling all my kids and said he thought there was a chance the show could be revived. There is some conversation about the way to do it, he recently told Yahoo! We'll See. I mean, we don't know. In 2013, a show was briefly revived and Lucci was not involved in this project. Why the time may be right for the soap opera's revival of Lucci isn't the only one talking about the soap making a comeback. Karey Burke, president of ABC Entertainment, recently made some comments that suggest the network could seriously consider bringing back both All My Children and One Life to Live, which was canceled in 2012. While at a Television Critics Association event in February, someone asked about the possibility of a revival of canceled daytime dramas. You can talk about that. There may be, Burke said, according to a report by the Soap Opera Network. Burke also added that he is a fan of the network with one of the rest of the soap, General Hospital. General Hospital is going strong, and I hope this show will continue long after I don't have that job anymore. I'm a fan, he said. Soap Opera Network also noted that should ABC decide to cancel Strahan & Sara and shake up its daytime lineup, back soaps could follow. The site also noted that Disney (which is ABC's parent company), owns 60% of Hulu, meaning a streaming reboot could be an option. What would these shows look like if they came back? Melissa Archer and Michael Easton in a scene from the 2012 episode One Life to Live | Lou Rocco/ABC via Getty Images Soap Operas fans are no doubt excited by rumors that all my children and one life live could come back to TV. But at this point, nothing is guaranteed and there are still many unknowns. On The Soaps comprehensive podcast, hosts Richard and Charlie discussed whether the shows would return to broadcast TV or perhaps air on the streaming service, arguing that it makes more sense to give fans a gift by letting them air on TV instead of their pay for streaming. The hosts also recommended a 30-minute format, which they say makes the most sense for today's audience, with limited attention. Another big question: How to handle storylines in a way that appeals to today's viewers as well as longtime fans. When old soaps come back, they'd also face the problem of competing viewers in an era when there are seemingly endless entertainment options at any time with a click of a remote control. Plus, soaps can be expensive to produce. Still, in an era when almost every old show seems to get a reboot, it doesn't seem crazy to think that some classic soaps could get another chance at life. Check out Cheat Sheet on Facebook! There are many different ways to watch your favorite content, so for many people, Hulu + Live TV has lost the mix. Hulu subscribers may already be familiar with this, but it's important to note that Hulu+ Live TV is separate from Hulu's regular on-demand content. Even if it's not the most memorable name out there, Hulu + Live TV isn't a surprising amount special offer to their subscribers. What is Hulu + Live TV? It may not be the most memorable name, but Hulu + Live TV deserves credit for describing exactly what it is: It's regular on Hulu, live TV streaming added. It's not a separate product with a standard Hulu on-demand offer - it's the same thing, just added features. This makes it different from any other TV streaming service. While AT&T TV Now offers a cable-like experience online. Hulu+ Live TV is designed to strike a balance between traditional cable/satellite and what we've come to expect from on-demand streaming services. This may make it more attractive to those who have grown up on Netflix and Hulu, but it also means that it could be more alienating to those who grew up when channel surfing was the norm. Supported devices hulu + live TV are available on the most popular streaming devices, including select Roku models, fourth generation or newer Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV and Google's Chromecast, along with Xbox One, Xbox 360, Nintendo Switch, and, more recently, Android TV. As of March 2020, it will also be available on PlayStation 4 consoles, now that Sony has completed its PSVue service - which has a live TV monopoly on the popular gaming console. Hulu + Live TV is also supported on the web using Chrome, Firefox, Safari and Microsoft Edge, as well as iOS and Android devices, including Amazon's Kindle Fire tablets. Finally, it is supported by selected smart TVs, including recent models OF ILG, Samsung and Vizio. During our testing of this article, we used Hulu + Live TV across smattering on various devices, including Amazon Fire TV, fourth-generation Apple TV, and both iOS and Android-powered phones. Features Like most live TV streaming services, Hulu + Live TV comes with cloud DVR. On the plus side, it features up to 50 hours of storage and does not limit how long you can record recordings - unlike many rival streaming services. On the downside, you need to pay extra if you want all its features. One striking issue with Hulu + Live TV cloud DVR is you can't fast-forward through commercials recordings without paying an extra $15 a month. Fortunately, this plan also raises your entire cloud DVR storage for 200 hours. Hulu + Live TV is similarly structured when it comes to how many screens you can watch at once. You're limited to two screens with the main offer. If you pay $15 a month for unlimited screens on offer, you can get exactly what it says by letting you pass the service around. If you decide to pay for both Enhanced Cloud DVR and Unlimited Screens, you will get a $10 discount, bringing the total price to $20 per month. Channels and prices If you want things to be easy to choose from, Hulu + Live TV can be the perfect service for you. Currently, the service offers only one basic package with 65 channels (depending on where you live). What makes Hulu + Live TV compelling ways to cord cutters is its addition to four major networks: ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox - something you can't sling TV or any other live TV services. If ESPN is also on board, the channel's selection includes many critical bases. In addition, you can upgrade your channel selection with premium offers, such as cable or satellite (see add-ons below). Which local channels you receive varies according to your location. Base package: $55 per month Add-ons for HBO, $15 per month for Cinemax, $10 per month for Showtime, $11 per month for Starz, $9 per month Other options Enhanced Cloud DVR, $15 per month: Increases cloud DVR storage for 50-200 hours, adds the ability to fast-forward through commercials stored in shows and movies, adds unlimited concurrent recordings, and allows you to stream the recording for 50-200 hours, adds the ability to fast-forward through commercials stored in shows and movies, adds unlimited concurrent recordings, and allows you to stream the recording of any supported device. Unlimited Screens, $15 per month: Increases available streams for two unlimited. Enhanced Cloud DVR & Unlimited Screens Bundle, $20 per month Disney+ You can bundle Disney+ with an ad supported Hulu account and AN ESPN+ account for just $13 a month. However, this offer does not officially extend to the full ad-free level of Hulu or Hulu + Live TV. Still, if you decide to switch to Hulu + Live TV for your live TV needs, you can add a Disney+ subscription and watch all its content (live TV, Hulu on-demand, Disney+) within your Hulu app – plus there's a clever trick that will still save you money. The viewing experience initially interfaced with Hulu + Live TV depended on Hulu's Guide screen, but since it proved frustrating for some users, Hulu has since added another way to navigate. Known as the Live Guide, it's a dedicated view of just Hulu + Live TV subscribers, which more closely resembles traditional on-screen guides used by most linear TV services, whether delivered over the Internet or not. In addition to the lineup showing you all channels, you can filter by category such as news or movies, making browsing through what is currently aired quite easily. The guide also includes the Recent Feeds section, which can double as a favorite lineup if you find yourself only watching the same few channels on weekdays if you use the service. It's a different service with different profiles, so you don't have to worry about someone else's recent channels bothering you. This also applies to DVR recordings. No matter what device we used to test Hulu + Live TV, the streaming experience was good. The image quality is crisp and clear without the softness that was so prevalent in the early days of live TV streaming, and we never encountered hitching or buffering. One thing to note is that if you use the service on different devices, such as Apple TV and Amazon Fire TV device, for example, you'll notice some interface changes. Swipe up on the Channel Guide on your Apple TV while you press the fire TV remote to access the guide. It wasn't a big problem for us, but it's something to remember. For our take If you're on the fence, should you choose Hulu + Live TV or another streaming service, start with this question: Do you already use Hulu? If the answer is yes, there is a good chance that you will enjoy packing all the entertainment in one place. If you ever hulu or you just aren't interested, it may not be a service for you. YouTube TV is its closest competitor in terms of channels and pricing, although Sling TV makes for a more flexible alternative thanks to its Orange and Blue packages. For $40, you can sling out the Orange and Blue bundle, which includes channels that Hulu doesn't have, like Comedy Central and MTV. By contrast, if you're a big news fan, Hulu has a lot of news channels on its base programming package that Sling TV doesn't offer without add-on channels. The good news is that you don't have to jump into paying hulu + live TV at the beginning. The service offers a seven-day free trial that has more than enough time to make sure that the service is running on your internet connection and devices and should help you make your decision. If you find it's not for you, check out our list of the best TV streaming services to get an overview of the alternatives. Editor's recommendations
