Share Comments The in-game screen for entering a Code Codes are bonuses that reward the player with gems, diamonds, membership or items. They can be found in the National Geographic Kids Magazine and Almanac/Infopedia, and are occasionally featured on the Daily Explorer. Other ways in which codes are distributed are from the Jam-A-Grams AJHQ sends on special occasions, such as vacations. Each code may only be used once, and both non-members and members can use codes. These codes can also be found by buying something from AJ Outfitters, entering codes Most codes are not case-sensitive and can be entered with upper case or lowercase. Players have three ways to enter codes. The first way is by going to the Home screen of Animal Jam and the box next to I Have a Code to Enter! which creates a text box in which the player can enter his code. However, the player cannot be notified because the box is only visible when the player signs in. The second way is by entering the code on Animal Jam's redeem your code page, where the player will then be taken to a page that confirms whether the code will be applied to the player's account. If the player is unsubscribed, he must re-sign in. The third method is to simply click the Enter Code button in the My Settings menu while playing in-game. When a Jazwares Adopt-A-Pet code is redeemed, an icon for the toy collected appears in the Adopt A Pet Checklist. If the player enters too many codes incorrectly, a security captcha pop-up appears to confirm that the user is not a robot. Previously, there was a glitch where a player would enter a code when their membership had expired and could play as a non-member using a member animal. However, this glitch was patched. If a code has expired and becomes available for use again, anyone who entered the code before the expiration date can reuse it. The CEO of Animal Jam, Clark Stacey, announced on his Twitter account the code PENGUINS due to the closure of the game Club Penguin Island. He said it was a gift for the Club Penguin community to make them feel welcome at Jamaa. When the code was released The Pet Penguin became available to all Jammers.
