Lions have symbiotic relationships with large, hoofed animals such as zebras, giraffes and hyenas. The type of symbiotic connection of lions to these animals is known as predation. Predation is a symbiotic bond in which two unlike species serve as each other's predator and prey. Symbiotic connections exist between organisms that are not within the same species. There are several kinds of these relationships that include predation, reciprocity, commensalism and parasitism. Reciprocity is a symbiotic bond in which both organisms benefit. Commensalism leads to benefits for one organism and does not affect another organism. Parasitism is expensive for one organism, but it benefits another. Copyright © 2021 Multiplier Media, LLC. Lions and zebras have the odd relationship. Surprising by our standards, normal for wildlife. It's safe to say it's dysfunctional, and one side, or both sides, is likely to suffer when they cross each other's paths. Leo is stronger, wittier and usually hungry. The seebra is faster and perhaps shrewder and, it is safe to assume, probably wants to win the fight more. On paper, one-on-one, it may be a fair match, but the lion usually doesn't like a fair fight, so either he'll attack in the pack, calling for the help of five lions to kill one zebra, or they'll go after much younger zebras, in the hope of an easy win. It's sad that the lion is so petty, but someone is trying to stop it from getting to the food and I know we're all petty when we need to eat. Indeed, it is the circle of life, and that is how it works. You don't have to worry because no matter if the gills are killed or go in, the system will continue on the same and we just have to count our blessings that we were born at the top of all food chains. I have a weak stomach when it comes to blood and violence, but I have to say these pictures and videos are amazing. Copyright © 2021 Multiplier Media, LLC. All rights reserved. You may wonder why Zebras and Wildebeests (Gnus) love hanging out together in the African savannah. You see them together on the Great Migration in Kenya and Tanzania, as well as here at Madikwe Game Reserve in South Africa. Find out why Seebra and Wildebeest are the best pals. Zebras and wildebeests (Gnus) graze in Madikwe gaming South Africa Food - Grass Length One reason is that zebras like to eat taller grass and Wildbyst shorter grass is a kind of symbiosis. There is no competition regarding food and everyone is happy. Looming Hazard Warnings Also, Wildebeests have a better sense of hearing, while Zebras can see very well. It's always great to have an ally who can warn you in case of any impending danger. Safety in numbers Another reason is that zebras and wildebeests love open African savannah - compared to Kudus or other antelopes that prefer thicker bushes. Being in the open obviously makes these two kinds of antelopes very vulnerable - so they'll get around and are best friends. Spot Zebras and Gnus on safari in Madikwe When you spot a group of zebras on safari at Madikwe Game Reserve follow Wildebeests (Gnus) as well. The room was quite big and comfortable. So contact these best friends during your next drive game at Rhulani Safari Lodge. Photograph / Video / Content: Dagmar Roshier Edit This film follows artist Edgar Payne from his childhood in the Ozark Mountains, through his years in Chicago, and before his discovery of the California landscape, which became his inspiration for life. It is produced in association with the Pasadena Museum of California Art, and created with curators and scientists by touring exhibition of the same name. Peters, Peter H. Hasrik, Jenkins Shannon, and Jean Stern Size: 10 1/2 x 12 inches. ISBN 9780764960536 ITEM A203 One of California's most gifted plein air artists, Edgar Alvin Payne (1883–1947) used animated brushes, a bright palette and a shimmering light of Impressionism, but his powerful images were unique among artists of his generation. While his contemporaries preferred a calmer, more idyllic representation of the natural landscape, Payne was devoted to objects of enduring beauty. Largely self-taught, he found inspiration and learning in nature itself. His majestic, vital landscapes, informed by his reverence for the natural world, are drenched in inner strength and active dynamism. Avid traveler Payne was one of the first artists to capture the cheerfulness of the Sierra Nevada, and his journeys through the Southwest led to equally remarkable images of the desert. In Europe towered peaks of the Alps and colorful harbors of France and Italy. His unconditional quest to convey the unspeakably exalted in his landscapes won him widespread acclaim—one prominent critic called him a poet who sings in colors. Released in conjunction with an itinerant exhibition organized by the Pasadena Museum of California Art, Edgar Payne: The Scenic Journey presents more than 125 reproductions of Payne's paintings, drawings and decorative arts, and rarely seen photographs from the artist's travels and selections from his personal collection of compositional studies. Essays by Peter H. Hasrik, Lisa N. Peters, Scott A. Shields, Jean Stern and Patricia Trenton trace Payne's development as he traveled the world, discovering magnetism in a variety of conditions ranging from the Californian coast, the Sierra Nevada and the starry southwestern desert to the Swiss Alps and the harbours and waterways of Europe. Shields's much researched chronology presents biographical influences that shaped Payne's pro-insignia career. About authors Scott A. Shields, Ph.D., is associate director and chief curator of the Crocker Art Museum in Sacramento, California, and author of numerous catalogs and books of the exhibition, including Edwin Deakin: The California Painting Artist. Patricia Trenton, Ph.D., is editor of iconic catalogs Independent Perfume: Women Artists of the American West, 1890-1945 and California Light, 1900-1930, and author of many books, including Joseph Kleich: Kaleidoscope Color. One of these books contains the most substantial collection of works by Edgar Payne and is one that I highly recommend to other artists. Edgar Payne: A Scenic Journey is published by Granate, a family independent publishing company based in Northern California. They are the museum's leading publisher, producing fine art, contemporary illustration and photography in a vast array of high-quality, affordable products. The company has partnered with many well-known institutions, including the National Gallery of Art, the Library British Library, Smithsonian Museum of American Art and Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Edgar Payne: A Scenic Journey is published in conjunction with an incredible exhibit of Payne's work that has traveled around the country for the past year and is currently on display at the Gilkrez Museum in Tulsa, Oklahoma until March 24, 2013. This beautiful 272-page book with crystal clear reproductions of Payne's work to explore. There are 120 color reproductions and more than 50 black and white photos and drawings. As one of California's plein air artists, Edgar Payne is often known for paintings that capture the peppy Sierra Nevada and the rich colors of the Southwest desert. In addition to these memorable items, the book also focuses on Payne's work from the elevated peaks of the Alps, as well as the bustling harbours of France and Italy. If you're a fan of Edgar Payne's work, this is one book you won't want to miss. Here are examples of some of the beautiful quality reproductions that are included in this Smyth-sewed hardcover book that measures 12 x 10.5.
