The responsible fashion company pdf

Dyeing vintage and seconhand practices are just some of them. Advantages not only relate to the lower impact on the environment, but also to long-term cost reductions, Brunello Cucinelli: Sustainable Luxury Chapter 8 of the fashion company responsible for analyzing the case of Brunello Cucinelli (the Italian luxury apparel brand) is a model of a responsible fashion company. The entire collection - an epitome of essential luxury - is an expression of living art. According to Francesca, as Francesca says: Brunello Cucinelli is a great example of an 'ethical and humane company' that decides to 'give back' what is taken from the territory (Solomeo, a small town from the Middle Ages in central Italy). The spirit of today's company is to be the center of society as a link among all stakeholders, employees, consumers and the public. The responsible fashion companies show that fashion and luxury executive companies, by deciding to integrate ethics and aesthetics into their value chain, can be 'executives' who engage in economic, social, cultural and moral progress at the same time. Francesca points out: this book is written especially for managers (real and future) of the fashion industry trying to provide tools and ideas to innovate their businesses. They represent a key role in change: the journey of responsibility is the result of a decision-making process that can be accelerated by managers, informs and trains on accountability issues, the ability to inspire and motivate the work of other employees. In this way, the moral cycle of responsible fashion can be enabled to create value. Francesca concluded.
