If you want a safe way to improve the look, durability and value of your home or apartment home, hardwood floors are the way to go. In addition to being beautiful and sturdy, hardwood floors are environmentally friendly as well. Wood is a renewable and recyclable natural resource. Most hardwood floors almost never need to be replaced and can add thousands of dollars to the value of a home. Hardwood floors also offer an incredible variety of aesthetic options. From the type of wood to the finish and design of the floor pattern, the wooden floors adapt to almost any taste and circumstance. If you've ever completed a home improvement project, you know the satisfaction of planning and executing it. You may not think that a typical do-it-yourselfer can install an entire hardwood floor on its own, but it is possible. All you need is the right planning, preparation and tools. If this sounds too daunting, or you're interested in a custom design, you can definitely work with a flooring professional. Whether you're going down the DIY route or using professional installation equipment, you'll find a lot of valuable information here. In this article, we'll examine several wood flooring options, describe, step by step, how to install and finish the floor yourself, and discuss wood floor maintenance and maintenance. Photo: istockphoto.com Flooring receives praise for its natural beauty, but requires different degrees of attention to maintain its good appearance. In large part, the maintenance requirements of the wood depend on its finish. Floors with penetrating finishes (which are soaked in wood) and top layers of wax (protecting the finish) can be a fairly difficult task to maintain because they easily absorb water and require solvent-based cleaners only, a reason why many people opt for wood floors sealed on the surface instead. These other wooden floors have polyurethane, urethane or other finishes that form a waterproof barrier and protect against light scratches and dents. Its cleaning is much easier to get right due to the wider variety of cleaners that can be used. If your floors, like many, are surface-sealed, read on to learn what to look for in an effective cleaner. Plus, don't miss our list of the best favorite selections from the best wood floor cleaning options, below! Photo: istockphoto.com What makes a great hardwood floor cleaner? Consider the following factors when navigating the wide and varied range of options. IngredientsIn search for cleaners that include non-corrosive ingredients: water, weak acids (citric acid) or weak bases (such as baking soda). Avoid products that contain strong acids or bases, such as nitric acid or sodium hydroxide, as they can strip the finish of surface-sealed floors. Also avoid wood floor cleaners that contain oil, which can leave sticky residue, or wax, which can overstate the finish of the floor and it's slippery. ConcentrationSose you will find wood floor cleaners in one of two formulations: Complete wood floor cleaners can be applied to the floor directly from the bottle because they contain all the necessary pre-mixed ingredients. They minimize overall time and effort, making them ideal for daily or last-minute cleaning jobs. Concentrated soil cleaner products contain a powerful cleaning liquid that must be diluted in water before use. As they take longer to prepare, they allow you to adjust the power (and pungence) by adding more or less water. PackagingHardwood floor cleaner is usually sold in one of three types of packaging: Spray bottles feature a built-in trigger that dispenses a fine fog of floor cleaning solution. Then clean or scrub the floor, which makes this packing option good for cleaning points or cleaning small areas. The jet bottles dispense a small pool of cleaner on the floor, which can then be scrubbed. This option is versatile enough to use in small or large floor areas. Refill bottles contain larger quantities, which you can pour into an aerosol bottle or liquid cartridge from a reusable spray mop. Avoid pouring refill bottle cleaner directly into the floor, as it is easy to accidentally dispense more than expected, which can cause floors to absorb liquid and swell. This is a worthy option for larger cleaning jobs of one or more floors. Our best photo selections: amazon.com Clean your affordable hardwood floors with this biodegradable plant-based formula. To use it, simply squeeze a small amount of the jet bottle and clean, without rinsing. Photo: amazon.com When you have plenty of room to clean, you can load Bona into the fluid cartridge of your spray mop and be on your way. This wax- and oil-free cleaner contains soil-friendly ingredients such as water, citric acid and hydrogen peroxide, all of which work great against dust, dirt and dirt. After cleaning, there is no need to rinse any remaining cleaners; will dry out without leaving residue. Photo: amazon.com For stain cleaning, consider a spray bottle formulation like this favorite black Diamond Stoneworks. Made with biodegradable water and surfactants, this eco-friendly, hypoallergenic cleaner helps clean food and beverage spills, dirt, dust and fingerprints with spray and cleaning simplicity. In addition, thanks to an additive, Wood & Laminate Floor Cleaner works to prevent new debris from sticking to the surface reducing the cleaning effort in the future. Photo: amazon.com To clean floors loaded with dirt and discolored, ZEP Hardwood and Laminate Floor Cleaner is a worthy option. Made from water, surfactants and methanol, the ZEP formula offers an extra-strong blow to stains, stains and scratch marks. Simply sweep or suck the floor, spray through the stained, stained area, or scrub, and then dry or scrub the wet surface. Any remaining liquid will dry out quickly, so there's no reason to rinse.
