One of the largest gun dealers, Dick's Sporting Goods, has recently raised the minimum age to buy firearms to 21 years old. The store also announced that it will remove some sports rifles from its shelves for good. On Wednesday, Walmart announced that it will do the same. Thomas Larson is the owner of Lone Star Shooting Sports, a Lubbock gun store and shooting range. He says he won't follow the move from Dick's Sporting Goods and Walmart. We're going to do what the federal government mandates us to do. Personally, I feel 18 is a good age, Larson said. What you're trying to do is take away a lot of rights away from people who haven't done anything wrong, all because of a few people who were either mentally ill or just bad people. Another Lubbock dealer, Sharpshooter Safe and Gun, agrees. Obviously there's a national discussion going on and everyone needs to look to see where their priorities are, Sharpshooter Sales Manager Ed Clements said. Of course we want schools to be safe, but at the same time we want to make sure that we respect the rights of all Americans so it's a complex issue, we'll be looking to see how it unfolds. Lubbock stores may not follow in the footsteps of these national stores, but they are still taking steps to be responsible retailers. Anyone who buys a firearm here has to go through a security check, Clements said. It is a requirement for firearm sellers to look at the individual to decide that the person should buy these guns. Lone Star Shooting Sports provides classes to ensure that people who weapons from their their are ready. We have two classrooms, we're going to do a lot of training here, Larson said, and we're going to teach responsible gun ownership. These stores will all watch the debate, pay attention to any changes in the law. There's a lot of discussion going on right now and basically we're going to look at the government, Clements said, and make sure that any changes with law and regulations, we're going to make sure we remain in compliance as we are today. Lone Star Shooting Sports will hold an active shooter training in the coming weeks. You can check the schedule on lonestarshootingsports.com. lonestarshootingsports.com.
