Keep up with the latest daily buzz with the BuzzFeed Daily newsletter! March 20, 2015 1 min read This story originally appeared on PR Daily Now that I've started paying attention to it, it's awful how many times I use the word cool. I don't use it in any formal, written communication, but I do most of course use it too often in conversation and text messages. We're all writers here, so let's see if we can't come up with some alternative words cool. (Cool as the adjective means good or great. That Tesla is cool.) Here are some to get started, although not all of them will be applied in every context.1. Amazing2. Bewitching3. We loved 5: Captivating5. It's adorable. Copacetic7. Delightful8. Dashing9. Divine10. Looking at its meaning – which is to convey agreement, appreciation, and approval with enthusiasm – gives us pause to think what about our word? In fact, when it comes to communicating who we are, all we have is our name. So what powers do we give it to? What's the layout? How do we deliver our name through our businesses? We have all experienced a disconnect between the words we want to convey to our customers and customers and the names that live inside of us. In a simple but profound book of The Four Agreements, author Don Miguel Ruiz reminds us to be impeccable with our word using his power of truth and love. Our challenge is to find the best means to convey and deliver our message in our voice, while making sense, keeping ourselves visible, and creating value among those with whom we share our words. Consider the newsletter as a means to achieve this goal. More and more of our work/life we see the need for networking, news exchange and community building. Companies from individual merchant to business established corporations use news as a marketing tool to achieve these goals. The newsletter keeps you ahead of customers, prospects, and colleagues; gives you a platform to share your focus; and helps you to find out your point of view. The news is also working to get employees, distributors, sales representatives, and news media excited about their service or brand. Add to it the fact that newsletters are easily forwarded and archived, interactive, and have low variable costs. Done right, the newsletters are the perfect and inexpensive way to market your business. Granted, carving out the time to create a newsletter may seem difficult, and the actual task of writing them can seem daunting. So do not go it alone – look at the experts. Joan Mansbach, an award-winning writer/marketing consultant with consumer lifestyle knowledge, writes news for clients and provides an easy, one-stop solution. You can take care of both writing and distributing to your database for the full package. Thanks to technology and various creative templates, newsletters can be created to graphically reflect our companies and services in the field of color and design. Dianne Coles, a leading New York image consultant, had this to say: Newsletters gave me the opportunity to communicate with my clients. In turn, they shared my closet tips and motivational excerpts with my friends, leading several new clients to me. Newsletters actually became an effective network information option. Michael Katz, author of It Sure Beats Working, heads up Blue Penguin Development, a service that provides customized, electronic newsletters to professional service companies. Constant Contact, an email marketing solution resource, distributes newsletters and creates online surveys, and Published Daily is a new pre-written article provider and newsletter distributor. Although it is difficult to quantify direct newsletters as a marketing tool, those who use and receive them confirm the results. When you decide to develop customers through the newsletter that you are going to stick with, the seeds you plant will germinate and its value will flower in your customer's response. In these times, when mega-marketing budgets are limited, the newsletter has become a little engine that could be chugging together, building credibility, garnering trust, and providing goodwill to your name, as well as relevant information your customers will appreciate. Think of your newsletter as a form of networking. When your recipients choose to share it with their colleagues and friends, the viral chain starts to increase your customer base and increase referrals. The key is to keep it both concise and useful by sharing a concise thumbnail industry updates and trend data, quick tips and other wisdom. Let your newsletter speak yours. Also think of the words of Henry David Thorel: Be faithful to your work, your name, and your friend. Namaste, Julie Julie Sue Auslander, M.Ed, WPO, WBE Service CSMS, LLC Nationally Certified Women's Business Enterprise A Women-Owned Business • www.csms-usa.com • Ramsey, NJ Ever need to insert an Excel worksheet into a Word document and link them so that when updating the main Excel worksheet, it automatically updates the values in the Word document also? Well, actually there are several ways to insert an Excel spreadsheet into Word: linking, embedding and creating a new spreadsheet. Whether you embed or link, the inserted Excel spreadsheet won't automatically update unless you specifically create a link between the two files. However, after the data in the embedded or linked spreadsheet is updated each time changes to the original excel spreadsheet are detected. In addition to inserting an existing Excel spreadsheet into Word, you can also insert a new Excel object that basically runs Excel in Word itself. In this article, I will show you how to do this using all three methods, and explain what you need to do to create a link. Copy paste method Let's start with the first method, which is basically just copying and pasting from Excel to Word. Note that this method can only include part of an Excel spreadsheet in a Word document. The second method will insert the entire spreadsheet into the Word file when you insert the object. Step 1: Select the area in your Excel spreadsheet that you want to include in Word, and then press Ctrl + C to copy the content. Step 2: Now go to your Word document, and press Ctrl + V to paste the contents into the Word file. To create a link, you need to click the Paste Options button in the lower-right corner, and choose Match Destination Table Style and Link to Excel or Preserve Source Formatting and Link to Excel. In newer versions of Word, you'll see multiple icons. You can hover over them and you will find the same two options as mentioned above. Step 3: This is all, now your table will be linked to the original Excel file. Each time you update an Excel file and reopen Word, Word will ask if you want to update the document with the new data from the linked files. Step 4: Click Yes, and your table will reflect the new values. If both files are open at the same time, the changes will appear live. There is obviously some pretty complicated mechanism that makes all this work, but fortunately you don't have to worry about it. It just works! Note that simply copy and paste and choose one of the linking options, you will only insert a standalone Excel object that updated when changes are made to the original Excel file. Additionally, you cannot edit data in Word Excel and reasel it in an Excel spreadsheet. It only works in one direction. If you make changes to the data in Word and save the file, you will receive the same message above asking if you want to update the file from the linked files when you go to open the file again. If you click Yes, it will simply reload the latest values from an Excel spreadsheet and overwrite any values you may have changed. If you want to edit the original Excel spreadsheet, you can do so from Word by right-clicking the data, clicking the Linked Worksheet Object, and then clicking Edit Link. This is useful if someone else has created this Word document and you don't know the location of the original Excel file. The second method of inserting an object is by using the Insert menu. Step 1: In Word, click the Insert tab, click the Object drop down list, and then select the object. Step 2: Click the Create from File tab, and click the Browse button to select your file. Step 3: When you select a file, two checkboxes will be displayed on the right. If you want to link an Excel spreadsheet, you must check Link to File. If you want to insert a spreadsheet so that it is not linked to the original file, don't select the check box. As mentioned above, using the Insert Object method, the dump of all contents in an Excel spreadsheet will be discarded in Word, not just part. Note that if you would double click the Excel object (if linked), then it will simply open the original Excel file in Excel itself. Finally, insert a table method, you can insert a fully editable Excel spreadsheet into Word by going to the Insert tab, clicking Table, and then clicking the Excel spreadsheet at the bottom. This method is only useful if you want to re-create a new Excel spreadsheet and plan to make changes to the spreadsheet from Word itself. What's cool about this method though, is that it will insert a floating spreadsheet and load the entire Excel menu well inside Word so you can insert formulas just like you would in Excel itself. You can add sheets, create filters, format cells and do everything just like normal in Excel. This is a quick and easy way to insert some data into a Word document that you can format correctly by using Excel instead of relying on Word tables that are very difficult to make pleasant. So these are all the different ways you can get an Excel spreadsheet in Word and link or not to link them based on your needs. If you have any questions, please try to comment. Enjoy! Enjoy!
