Discover more about our Japanese Chinese puppies for sale below! Race History This small and well-balanced race is believed to have originated in China and was given as gifts to the Emperor of Japan. His name was changed from Japanese spaniel to Japanese chin in 1977. It is assumed that the Japanese ordeal was crossed with small spaniel-type dogs to achieve the look it has today. This breed was considered as a separate being and not as a dog; is a unique breed that is strictly owned for the company. Temperament A unique fact about Japanese Chin is his ability to form his personality around his environment because of his sensitivity. This breed has a very amicable and gentle temperament and is also self-confident and extremely intelligent. As a result of its sensitive temperament, it can feel the mood of its owner and change its own mood to match. Chin Japanese is known to be alert, friendly and loyal. Medium Small size of Japanese torment makes a suitable apartment dog; is not one to be separated from its owner because it yearns for company and could suffer from anxiety when left on Own. Japanese chin can also adapt to any life situation; if he lives in a quiet house, he tends to become reserved and vice versa. Exercise When exercising Japanese Chin, keep in mind that if you get bored along the way, it will also become therefore, exercise will no longer be fun. The best way to exercise this breed is to create an active mood for exercise. It takes a smaller amount of exercise because of its size, unlike other dogs; a daily walk and play in the yard would do. Grooming Chin's Japanese has an easy to maintain coat, brushing sessions once or twice a week would do magic because it has no problem with tangles. It is a dog ordered by nature and licks clean, so bathing is necessary only every 3-4 months or whenever it gets dirty or starts to stink. Particular attention should also be paid to its skirt and the area under the ears and legs. The face should also occasionally be erased with a damp cloth. Our Japanese Chin chickens for sale come from either THE USDA licensed commercial breeders or hobby breeders with no more than 5 breeding mothers.
