Peak novel study answers

Redirecting to Download Responses to Peak Novel Packet PDF after seconds To continue liking our site, we ask that you confirm your identity as a human. Thank you very much for your cooperation. Using a level online news source (such as Newsela and ThinkCERCA) I would incorporate nonfiction articles on the main themes of history: climbing, Mount Everest, Tibet, New York, HAPE, sherpas, etc. I would like students to highlight using the Chrome Extension, CiteLighter, for the main idea. Using the content they highlighted in their LightSail app for Peak, I'd like students to like the story to be compared to the information they found in the nonfiction article. Students can also complete article questionnaires and critical thinking questions within the newsela or thinkabout content. Normally, I would then assign an essay asking students to connect Peak's themes to nonfiction texts. This would be one of two 5-paragraph essays that I could ask a student to write throughout the new study. Reading Level: Ages 12-17 This literature guide was created as part of an 11th grade project at Castle Park High School in Indiana. Students chose the book to read, produced a video book lecture (link below) and wrote the following questions and ideas from the project to stimulate thought and action on real issues. Book Talk for Peak Pre-Reading Questions: Have you ever had to go somewhere for a trip that you really didn't want to continue and ended up being a great time in your life? If you were in a very bad situation, which parent or other family member would you choose to help you get through this? How long have you been seeing your own family? Could you put someone above yourself in life if it meant not gaining fame and fortune, but letting them have it? Connections: Mount Everest is the highest and deadliest mountain to climb in the world. Recently, 16 people died on this mountain. Sherpas are the mountain's native climbers and act as guides for newcomers who want to climb the mountain. These Sherpas know how to climb and are very excellent at the work they do on the mountain. The Sherpas are great at counting the weather on the mountain and know good days to climb. All 16 people who died a few weeks ago on this mountain were Sherpas. Imagine what newcomers think about it. During Reading Questions: 1. What was Peaks' motive behind the rise of the skyscraper? What do you think he got out of this? 2. How would you describe Peak's relationship with his parents? 3. Do you agree that courts should hold Peak accountable for the death of the other teenager who tried to climb a skyscraper? Why or not? 4. What thinks it helps peak get through being in the juvenile detention center locked locked up 5. What do you think influences Peak to rise the way he does? Why would he risk his life just to mark a building? 6. How do you think Peak felt to find out that he was going to have to live with a father who hasn't been around for him his whole life? How would you feel? 7. Why do you think Josh is having his son climb Mount Everest? 8. When you were 14, how would you react if you found out that your father was using you to help you make money? Explain your thoughts. 9. On a mountain like Everest can you afford to have confidence in the people who lead you? Explain. 10. What do you think is Zopa's real motivation to be on the mountain while he has? 11. What do you think will happen to Sun-Jo and Peak's friendship now that we know that Sun-Jo is Zopa's grandson? Why do you think they kept it a secret? 12. How do you think Zopa knows the mountain as well as he does? 13. Put yourself in Peak's shoes. If you were told you you wouldn't be able to climb the mountain you've been training for weeks and weeks, would you have reacted the same way or differently from Peak? 14. Why did Peak help the sun-jo dome and then not get cameu? Would you have done the same? 15. What was the main idea or concept behind the book? Support your response with book details. Connections: Recently, an accident happened on Everest killing several Sherpa's. This shows that you have to be very careful on this mountain and that it is very dangerous, showing that you have to have courage to climb. (pg. 164) I think one connection you can make throughout the book is that you can never give up. Even when you think you are done or that you have no more left you can always go a little further and you have to strive to do so. A few weeks ago, a person climbed the new twin tower in New York. Just as Peak does in the book I'm sure he has the same hurry and the same great feeling after he finished something he struggled to accomplish. When you set goals for yourself and try to accomplish them, then things become easier in almost any aspect of life. (pg. 3) The book talks about prayer flags and how when you reach the top you place your prayer flag on the summit. These people have something or someone they believe in, and you need it, you need something to seek guidance when you're struggling or need an extra push. You have to have faith to help you go through any difficult task. (pg. 246) After Reading Questions: Who do you think was the second most important character? Options can be Zopa, Sun-Jo Josh Wood. They all play very imperative imperative in history. They all affect Peak in an important way, but who affects yours the most? What was the underlying theme of the whole book? How has Peak changed and matured throughout the book? What do you think could happen next if the book hadn't stop? One idea might be that Peak will go back to New York and finish school, or maybe he'll be traveling with Josh again. Will Peak be known worldwide for what he did? What factors would change if you were the author of the book? Were there aspects of the book that didn't make sense? Even the characters can be changed in the story. Changing a situation or character can also stimulate any new outcome. Connections: The book is full of suspense and twists that are very unexpected. Peak may be related to The Summit by Gordon Korman. These are four boys chasing their dreams and trying to be the youngest to reach the summit of Mount Everest. Until a major storm hits and the extreme scarcity settles. Both books contain suspense and chilling surprise. When you think about climbing things, you don't think about getting into trouble with the law. Peak faced a heavy fine and could even have been sent to prison for what he did. Organizations such as the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention help to search for and help young adults. Maybe someone committed a crime, but was it so horrible that they need to be severely punished or fined? Activities Develop an accurate timeline for book events. Place the information on a timeline in a PowerPoint or prezi presentation. List five words that describe Peak. From there, define each word and go to different students in the school and interview them about the words. (Example: Determination. I believe that determination is a mentality that all competitors have to have and... etc.) After the interviews, write an essay on the words. Organize a day of charity climbing at a local climbing facility. Give the proceeds to a service organization like Peak Potential, a climbing program for children with disabilities, or the YMCA for its girls' mentoring program called Girls Rock.
